Buhl man faces up to Alzheimer's effects

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

BUHL – Every time 62-year-old Lawrence Wheeler takes his medication, he checks off his schedule.

Wheeler makes an extra effort to remember where he puts things as he goes about his daily household chores.

That way, whenever someone questions the Alzheimer's disease patient about his routine, he'll have an answer.

"As soon as someone asks me about something, it puts me on the defense," said Wheeler, adding that he thinks people don't trust his memory or intelligence because he has Alzheimer's. "Then you get to the point where you don't trust yourself anymore."

Just like former President Reagan, who announced in a handwritten letter Saturday that he has Alzheimer's disease, Wheeler is in the early stages of the disease's deterioration process. Alzheimer's is a brain disease that can lead to confusion, memory loss, restlessness, perception problems, inability to do motor tasks, inability to draw or construct and speech trouble.

In the letter, Reagan wrote he wanted to disclose his condition to raise public awareness. Wheeler and his wife Patricia said there probably will be more money spent on research to find a cure since a former president has Alzheimer's.

"I'm not dwelling upon it," said the rural Buhl man, who found out this year he has the disease. "This is what's happened and that is it.

"There's no 'boo-hooing' and 'why me and not someone else?'"

Dr. Richard Hammond, a neurologist at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls, said he has 55 patients with Alzheimer's disease in varying stages.

In Idaho, an estimated 20,000 are affected by the disease, said George King, executive director of the Boise-Treasure Valley Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association.

About 10 percent of those aged 65 to 74 have Alzheimer's disease; that percentage doubles for those aged 75 to 84, and those 85 or older have a 47 percent chance of having Alzheimer's, King

Eye drops may diagnose disease

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A simple test using eye drops may identify patients with Alzheimer's disease, a brain-destroying disorder now diagnosed with certainty only after death.

Although medical science now has little to offer Alzheimer's patients, Huntington Potter of the Harvard Medical School said the test could be important when new drugs for the disease are developed. He said the test would make an early diagnosis possible, enabling patients to plan, while they are still able, for the inevitable loss of mental ability.

Researchers at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston and at Harvard report that an eye drop drug called tropicamide causes the pupils in the eyes of Alzheimer's patients to dilate about four times more readily than those of patients without the brain disease.

Potter said that Alzheimer's disease patients are so sensitive to tropicamide that their pupils will change by about 23.4 percent, while patients without Alzheimer's have only a 5 percent change.

Tropicamide is the drug that ophthalmologists routinely use to dilate pupils during eye exams. Its effects last only briefly. When used for the Alzheimer's test, the drug is diluted to about one percent of the concentration used in eye tests.

Alzheimer's disease progressively destroys the brain, wiping out memory, thought and the control of body functions. The disease strikes about 10 percent of the population over the age of 65 and currently affects about 20 million people worldwide.

The eye-drop Alzheimer's test cannot be conducted in most doctors' offices because it requires a special instrument to precisely measure the size of pupil dilation, Potter said.

Potter, senior author of a study to be published today in the journal Science, originated the idea of using tropicamide to test for Alzheimer's after noting that patients with Down's syndrome were highly sensitive to the drug.

Down's syndrome is an inherited disorder that causes mental retardation. Down's patients after the age of 30 often develop the same brain lesions and dementia symptoms that are characteristic of Alzheimer's disease.

Congress picks stir worries

Environmental community edgy over Gem future

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's environmental community is subdued and apprehensive as Helen Chenoweth and Phil Batt prepare to take office.

Batt will replace outgoing Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus – widely hailed as an environmental champion – and Chenoweth succeeds Democratic Rep. Larry LaRocco, who was also known for his environmental work.

The Republicans ran campaigns hostile toward some environmental issues, particularly the use of water to save endangered Idaho salmon.

Chenoweth

"I'm feeling quite discouraged," said Pat Ford, of the Save Our Wild Salmon Coalition in Boise. "I don't think there are many Idaho fishermen or conservationists who are very happy.

"I think we're going to see some real assaults on this state's natural beauty, its free-flowing rivers and quality of life."

Chenoweth, in particular, will be one to watch, Ford said.

"It concerns me that Helen Chenoweth, who is now in the House, received a substantial amount of money and a substantial amount of help from people who want to dig mines in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area," he said.

"People who love that country will have to tell her early, and often, to keep her hands off the SNRA. I don't think she'll listen easily," Ford said.

"We have to go to the people now, because we're not going to get anywhere if we go to the congressional delegation or the governor."

Chenoweth spokesman Steve Meistrell said conservationists "are going to be surprised with how Helen reacts to their requests.

"She is going to work with everybody and we're hoping that people aren't scared of Helen," he said. "They'll be heard out, and she's going to represent Idaho."

Batt and Chenoweth "are two very different Republicans," said Karl Brooks, executive director of the Idaho Conservation League.

"Batt is a good citizen and a good patriot who has a strong commitment to a better Idaho. He does not come with a strong, preset ideological agenda," he said.

"We don't anticipate we'll agree with everything he proposes, but we do expect to get a fair shake," Brooks said. "He's no novice to environmental issues."

The election also gives Rep. Mike Crapo "a real opportunity to shine," Brooks said. Crapo – who coasted to an easy victory Tuesday – has a strong grasp of the problems, and solutions, facing Idaho's endangered species, he said.

Proposition 187 tempers joy

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — They couldn't vote the day Proposition 187 passed.

Two days later, they became American citizens.

For 7,000 immigrants who were sworn in as U.S. citizens during a ceremony Thursday, joy was tempered by sadness over the passage of a California measure that would deny schooling, welfare and most health care to illegal aliens.

"I'm feeling bad because it's not right," said 28-year-old Carlos Urrutia, who fled civil war in El Salvador six years ago and took his place in the crowd to recite the citizenship oath before a federal judge.

Urrutia said he had entered the United States legally but worries about a pregnant relative who doesn't have permission. And he worries about illegals he has never met.

"It's harder living in this country without papers," Urrutia said.

Ernesto Bautista said he can do more than just complain now that he is a citizen: "At

Moderate Republicans resist right-wing tide

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Newly elected conservatives are about to swell the Republican ranks on Capitol Hill, but party pragmatists are signaling they aren't about to abdicate control of next year's agenda.

The shape of health and welfare reform, the size and possibility of tax cuts, the future of abortion rights and gun control laws — all could well hinge on which faction prevails.

The moderate-conservative split is personified by the incoming GOP leaders. Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, soon to be majority leader, even recalled with a laugh this week that House Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich once branded him "the tax collector for the welfare state."

The past year brought out intra-GOP differences as fundamental as whether there should be modest health reform or none at all; whether deficit reduction or tax cuts are a higher priority; whether tax increases are ever justified; whether government can ever be constructive.

"I think there are a lot of people who consider themselves conservative who still understand the government has some responsibility and the government does a lot of good things," Dole said.

Among those people are the pragmatic Republican governors returned to office this week in landslides across the country.

Heavy rains drench West, Southeast

The Associated Press

Heavy rain fell Thursday along the West Coast and in the Southeast, with snow in the mountains of California and gusty wind in the Rocky Mountain region.

Nearly 4 inches of rain fell overnight east of Chico in Northern California and up to 1.5 inches fell in the same period in parts of Southern California.

Snow fell at elevations of 1,500 feet in the Northern California mountains and 5,000 feet in the southern part of the state.

To the east, 6 to 10 inches of snow fell during the night in Yellowstone National Park in northwestern Wyoming. Elsewhere in the region, wind gusted up to 53 mph.

New Hampshire's Mount Washington had wind gusts of 83 mph.

A band of rain showers and a few thunderstorms stretched across the Southeast. In the 24 hours ending at 3 p.m. EST, Memphis, Tenn., received just more than an inch and Alexandria, La., received 1.5 inches.

Tropical Storm Gordon, the seventh named storm of the 1994 Atlantic hurricane season, formed off Nicaragua in the western Caribbean Thursday. The weak storm began heading north on a meandering path that could bring it near the United States.

Northwestern Texas had is first freeze of the season, with readings in the 20s in the southern Panhandle, including 26 degrees in Tulia and 27 in Muleshoe.

The nation's high was 88 degrees in Fort Myers, Fla., and the low was 10 degrees in Winter Park, Colo.

said. The rate in which Alzheimer's patients deteriorate varies, Hammond said.

Hammond said Alzheimer's is difficult to diagnose, especially in the early stages, so he rules other possibilities out first. Often older people who appear to have Alzheimer's are depressed, and their problems can be treated with medication, he said.

People in the early stages of Alzheimer's don't have trouble remembering things from the past or have difficulties in their own homes, but they have trouble dealing with new environments when they visit other people or different towns, Hammond said.

"If a person comes in complaining of Alzheimer's, they usually don't have it," Hammond said his general rule is. "If a spouse comes in complaining of Alzheimer's, they usually have it."

Lawrence Wheeler said he wasn't much troubled by his slight memory losses, such as walking out the front door and not remembering why. But Patricia Wheeler was troubled – and she noticed a lot more than lapses in her husband's memory the past couple of years.

The first real sign that something was wrong, she said, was when they would come home from teaching primary children at their Mormon church and his bag would have untouched lesson materials in it. The couple would prepare for their lessons together, but he would interrupt her class to ask what he was supposed to do, Patricia Wheeler said.

Lawrence Wheeler also would get upset – with both her and himself – and grind his jaw, she said. He never used to be temperamental, she said, and didn't seem to realize what he was doing.

"It hurts when you love someone and all of a sudden there's a change," Patricia Wheeler said. "Since he got this, if I just look at him he's ready for tears or temper.

"I bet if I'd ask him an hour later what had taken place he wouldn't remember."

Now Lawrence Wheeler is on medication that helps calm his emotions, she said.

Alzheimer's disease runs in the Wheeler family. For instance Lawrence Wheeler's younger brother, who has two sons, also has Alzheimer's disease, Patricia Wheeler said.

And that's why Lawrence Wheeler is now happy he and his wife of 32 years are childless.

"He looks at it very intelligently and says 'Aren't we lucky we never had any children?' said Patricia Wheeler, adding that they discuss what will happen when Lawrence Wheeler's condition worsens. "We talk about it and try to look at it on the bright side."

Law barred gun buy

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The ex-convict accused of shooting at the White House was stopped from buying a pistol a month earlier when a gun dealer ran a background check on him.

No such on-the-spot check was required when he bought the rifle he allegedly used at the White House.

The law did what it was intended to do in terms of preventing Francisco Duran from purchasing a handgun on Sept. 30," said Jim Borowski, head of the state bureau of investigation's crime information center.

Moderate

But there are few moderates in the highly partisan House. And while the Senate has several prominent centrists, the spotlight will be trained on a swelling band of aggressive conservatives led by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Pennsylvania's Rick Santorum calls himself a rabble-rouser and created a stir during the campaign with an offhand remark that maybe Social Security benefits should be pushed back from age 65 to age 70.

One potent symbol of party fissures is the "Contract with America" conceived by Gingrich and signed by hundreds of Republican House candidates.

The Senate leadership never adopted the contract, a list of 10 pledges ranging from tax cuts and to protecting defense spending to welfare reform, term limits and a balanced budget amendment.

Gingrich, R-Ga., has been interpreting the Republican landslide as an overwhelming mandate for his 10 proposals. Dole, R-Kan., sounded less than fired up at a news conference this week. "If they come to the Senate ... I assume we'd end up voting on them," he said.

Dole may be more in tune with public opinion. An AP poll found only three in 10 voters had ever heard of the contract.

Wild

Sen. Dirk Kempthorne also has ability to make a name for himself as an environmental preservationist, Brooks said, adding: "I consider him to be a person who doesn't have an answer to every question before he has the facts."

The Republican majority in Congress "will now have the responsibility to distinguish between reform and radicalism" as it rewrites major pieces of federal legislation – such as the Endangered Species Act and the Clean Water Act, Brooks said.

Wendy Wilson, executive director of Idaho Rivers United, echoed Brooks' analysis.

"Some people see this as a mandate to walk all over the environment, but it's not," Wilson said. "Instead, it's time for the Republican Party to take back environmental issues and produce results for everyone."

Wilson expects to see more laissez faire environmental policy from Idaho's leaders.

"But the environment is going to continue to be a popular issue with voters," she warned, "and people are going to continue to want clean water and a clean environment.

"Now it's time for the Republicans to deliver," Wilson said.

Mitch Sanchotena, executive coordinator of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon United in Boise, said the Republican sweep "is not going to make my job any easier, but I'm optimistic that it's not going to make it much tougher."

He predicted that Batt will act responsibly to protect Idaho's salmon and steelhead fisheries – and even forecast a softening in Sen. Larry Craig's staunch economy-over-environment philosophy.

"This is like going fishing in many ways," Sanchotena said of the midterm elections. "New dawns bring new hopes."

Citizens

least now I can vote."

Francisco Ortiz, 42, another in the group at the Los Angeles Convention Center, was born in Mexico and sees hope in this country despite overwhelming support for Proposition 187.

"That's why I became a citizen," Ortiz said. "There are laws we don't agree with, but we're still Americans." He, too, said he had entered the country legally.

As they spoke, the fate of Proposition 187 was in the hands of the courts, the result of legal challenges filed by immigration activists and schools.

A federal judge on Wednesday barred enforcement of the measure for a week until a hearing. And a state judge blocked enforcement of the sections expelling illegal immigrants from public schools.

The fallout continued Thursday:

• Cuba, which this year saw thousands of its citizens flee to the United States, condemned the measure. Deputy Foreign Minister Jorge Bolanos called it "xenophobic and discriminatory."

• Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block reported that Immigration and Naturalization Service officials have said they don't have the money to enforce the measure and don't plan to change any procedures.

In Los Angeles, where the new Americans waved flags and hugged family members, there was a lot of talk about Proposition 187.

"If they ask for my papers because of the color of my skin, I'll just show them," said Jorge Calderon, 44, from Mexico. "But no vaccinations for children, taking the kids from school — that's what really bothered me."

Santiago Rodriguez, a truck driver who illegally entered the United States from Mexico 24 years ago, said he could "care less" about the measure. He said it is easy for illegal immigrants to work around the system, and Proposition 187 would not change that.

"If they put a road hazard in, you just have to overcome it," he said. "Have they stopped illegal immigrants from coming in? No, nothing is going to change that."

How GOP Senate, House shape up

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — With Republicans taking command of Congress in January, there will be massive turnovers in committee chairmanships in both houses.

Here is how the new lineup will look:

SENATE

Agriculture: Richard G. Lugar of Indiana, a moderate conservative, is leery of big price supports but a champion of farm exports. He will preside over a major rewrite of the farm bill, setting agricultural policy for the next five years.

Appropriations: Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, a moderate, is not likely to sympathize with efforts by some of his GOP colleagues to increase defense spending.

Armed Services: Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, a 92-year-old conservative, will be pressing for bigger defense budgets.

Banking: Alfonse M. D'Amato of New York, a conservative, is certain to use the committee to torment President Clinton in the Whitewater real estate case.

Budget: Charles E. Grassley of Iowa, a conservative maverick, is a staunch critic of fraud and waste in military contracting.

Energy and Natural Resources: Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, a conservative, is a prime advocate of spending cuts and a balanced budget and a strong opponent of Clinton's proposed mining reforms and higher grazing fees on public lands.

Environment and Public Works: John H. Chafee of Rhode Island, a moderate, is an advocate of environmental protection and federal spending for highways, mass transit and other public works — putting him at odds with the anti-government conservatives in his party.

Ethics: Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, a conservative and fierce partisan, has nevertheless shown evenhandedness in judging the ethics missteps of his colleagues in both parties. This committee is evenly balanced with three Republicans and three Democrats and has traditionally steered clear of sharp partisanship. His first order of business would be managing the committee's ongoing investigation of sexual misconduct charges against Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

Finance: Bob Packwood of Oregon, a moderate, is likely to lead the GOP effort to cut the capital gains tax and double the income tax exemption for children, despite distractions from his investigation by the Ethics Committee.

Foreign Relations: Jesse Helms of North Carolina, a conservative, is a tireless gadfly who is likely to challenge many of Clinton's foreign policy initiatives and appointments.

Governmental Affairs: William V. Roth Jr. of Delaware, a conservative, would use the committee to investigate the efficacy of Clinton administration programs.

Judiciary: Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, a conservative, is an anti-abortion advocate who would push for legislative curbs on access to abortions. He is also likely to put the president's appeals court nominees under the microscope.

Labor and Education: Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, a moderate, believes in more stringent oversight of federal job training and Head Start programs.

HOUSE

Agriculture: Pat Roberts of Kansas, a conservative, is a strong proponent of grain price supports and advocates subsidies to promote farm exports.

Appropriations: John T. Myers of Indiana, a conservative, is a strong advocate of a balanced budget but also an adept practitioner of conveying pork to the folks back home.

Armed Services: Floyd D. Spence of South Carolina is a conservative who wants to boost spending for defense.

Banking and Housing: Either Jim Leach of Iowa, a moderate, or Bill McCollum of Florida, a conservative. Either one would renew the committee's investigation of the Whitewater-Madison Savings and Loan case.

Budget: John R. Kasich of Ohio, a moderate conservative, will push for deep cuts in domestic spending, including medical programs.

Education and Labor: Bill Goodling of Pennsylvania, a moderate conservative, likes the idea of school vouchers to encourage choice of schools.

Energy and Commerce: Either Carlos J. Moorhead of California or Thomas J. Bliley Jr. of Virginia. Bliley, a conservative, is a key ally of Speaker-designate Newt Gingrich and is opposed to Clinton's environmental and health care initiatives.

Foreign Affairs: Either Benjamin A. Gilman of New York or Jim Leach of Iowa. Both are moderate, but Gingrich thinks Gilman is too liberal and independent. If Leach opts for the Banking chairmanship, Toby Roth of Wisconsin, an untested conservative but more in line with Gingrich's brand of conservatism, might vie with Gilman for Foreign Affairs. Roth is most likely to fight Clinton on foreign policy issues. Both Gilman and Leach might be more cooperative.

Government Operations: William F. Clinger Jr. of Pennsylvania, a moderate, would use the committee to probe administration programs, press for continued reduction of the federal bureaucracy, and challenge regulations that impede businesses.

Judiciary: Henry J. Hyde of Illinois, a conservative, would push for more curbs on abortion rights and reopen crime legislation to cut back spending for prevention programs while increasing money for enforcement and incarceration.

Natural Resources: Don Young of Alaska, a conservative, is a long-time advocate of opening federal lands to timber and mining interests. He would also resist the persistent pressure to put more land in national parks and recreation areas.

Public Works and Transportation: Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania, a moderate conservative, is a champion of highway construction and other public works.

Rules: Either Gerald B.H. Solomon of New York or David Dreier of California. Both are conservatives, but Solomon has clashed with Gingrich, and Dreier is a close Gingrich ally. Either one could stack the rules to minimize Democratic influence on legislation.

Land, space researchers survey ozone layers

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Scientists on both sides of the Atlantic launched ozone-mapping balloons and rockets Thursday as space shuttle Atlantis and its tag-along satellite soared overhead making their own survey.

Scientists need the extra insight into the Earth's ozone layer to make sure the information they're getting from the orbiting spacecraft is correct.

NASA has launched 17 weather balloons and 19 small rockets from Wallops Island, Va., so far for the experiment. The German weather service has sent up 14 ozone-measuring balloons from an observatory in Bavaria. And Russian scientists have sent up at least two rockets with atmospheric monitors.

The launches will continue until the six shuttle astronauts retrieve the German satellite Saturday for the trip home on Monday. The crew released the satellite last Friday.

Each launch is choreographed so that the balloon and rocket instruments measure the same components of the ozone layer as the infrared telescopes on the satellite — at the same time, too, with the satellite flying almost directly overhead.

The satellite trailed Atlantis by up to 45 miles Thursday at an altitude of 185 miles.

Fleming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patricia S. Fleming, tapped by President Clinton to lead his AIDS policy office, says her advice to teen-agers is to delay having sex as long as possible to protect themselves from the deadly virus.

Fleming, a Washington insider who stepped into the job on a temporary basis three months ago, said she accepted the post permanently because "I realized it was not impossible."

"I have power. I have authority. I have access. I can make things happen," Fleming said in an interview before a White House ceremony where Clinton announced her appointment Thursday.

She succeeds Kristin Gebbie, a Washington state health administrator and nurse who gave up the job in June under fire from AIDS activists and frustrated over the "conflicting expectations of what an 'AIDS czar' could do," Gebbie called herself more a cheerleader than a czar.

Gebbie infuriated conservatives early in her tenure with a speech complaining that the United States was a "repressive Victorian society" that tried to deny gay activity, particularly in teens.

Fleming, who has spent two decades working on health and social policy for liberal members of Congress and in the Carter and Clinton administrations, tiptoed carefully around a question about teens and sex.

The HIV epidemic "certainly puts a pall on growing up if you're sexually active," she said.

Fleming, who has three sons in their 30s, said, "I think kids today have to delay having sex as long as possible to protect themselves."

"My advice would be to try to abstain from sex until you find a partner you want to stay with for a long, long time," she said.

She also counsels safe sex.

"Sexually active kids should have access to condoms. But as to where they get them, that is a local decision," said Fleming, echoing Clinton administration policy. "The federal government cannot dictate to a local community that they should distribute condoms in schools."

Some 400,000 Americans have been infected with HIV and 240,000 have died since the epidemic began in the early 1980s. The disease is spread through infected blood and bodily fluids. Most of the victims have been homosexual men or intravenous drug abusers, but the virus can also be spread during heterosexual intercourse, and infants can be infected in the womb.

Fleming, formerly a special assistant to Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala, said she is troubled that new HIV infections are still occurring at the rate of 40,000 a year.

"When I leave this job I would like to be able to say that number has been reduced," said Fleming.

"I am concerned about young people getting HIV. One out of four infections occurs in people under 20 years of age. That's really appalling," she said.

She also is concerned about "the empowerment of women to protect themselves. That means giving them the tools and the technology to do that including vaginal microbicides that don't depend on use of a male condom."

She said she wants to focus on stemming the rising rates of infection among young gay men, among minorities, among women and adolescents.

New Ways and Means head promises to rewrite tax laws

Archer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Incoming Ways and Means Chairman Bill Archer of Texas said today his committee would begin immediately to rewrite the nation's tax laws to promote savings and investment.

Archer, who is expected to take over the chairmanship of the crucial tax-writing panel when Republicans reorganize the House in January, delineated his agenda for the new Congress' first 100 days, much of it already outlined in Republicans' "Contract with America."

He pledged the committee would tackle "whatever we can do within the tax code to increases savings."

Among his goals:

• Cut the tax rate on capital gains from the sale of stocks, bonds and other assets, and index the tax so that people, in effect, do not pay tax on gains that represent inflation.

• Raise the earnings limit on outside income for Social Security recipients and eliminate the tax on benefits paid to upper-income people.

• Restore tax-sheltered Individual Retirement Accounts for upper income people. Currently only individuals earning $25,000 or less and married couples earning $40,000 or less — and people without pensions — can get a full deduction for their IRA contributions.

• Establish tax-favored medical savings accounts for people to pay for health insurance and medical bills.

• Phase out the marriage penalty in the tax code, which taxes single people who live together at a lower rate than married couples.

Archer said his panel, working with the Budget Committee, would pay for the tax cut through "innumerable spending savings."

In the longer term, the committee will examine ideas for eliminating the income tax altogether, such as a national sales tax.

He also said the committee would reform the welfare system to discourage dependency and — after the first 100 days — seek to produce a health-care reform package that would allow workers to carry health insurance from job to job, eliminate the practice of denying coverage to pre-existing conditions, revamp the malpractice system and help small businesses join together to purchase insurance for their employees.

Rather than universal coverage, such a system would seek to guarantee 100 percent access to insurance, he said.

On another matter, he said the current Democratic-controlled Congress should vote on the new world trade treaty, negotiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, as scheduled on Nov. 29 rather than leave it to the new Republican Congress.

Clinton urges GOP to 'do the right thing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to get on with governing after his party's stunning election defeats, President Clinton went on the offensive Thursday and urged Republicans to put aside partisanship to promote world trade.

Clinton challenged congressional leaders and members of both parties to "do what's right for all Americans" by approving a new 123-nation world trade agreement.

The White House said a vote by the lame-duck Democratic Congress on the trade agreement late this month would serve as the first test of the Republicans' approach.

"This should not be a partisan issue," Clinton said in a speech at his alma mater, Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service. "I believe that if we continue to work together on this trade issue — Democrats, Republicans and independents — as Americans, we can agree on ways to help all our people make their way in the new economy."

Tying the trade issue to the elections, Clinton said voters sent a message that they feel insecure about their futures at a time when "the pressures of the global economy are relentless and dynamic."

"There is this feeling that we're waiting for the other shoe to drop," he said.

Clinton said such insecurities persist despite progress on the economy, crime, education and other issues that he claimed for the Democrats.

"Until Tuesday, I thought we'd made a pretty good beginning," he said ruefully. "In an ordinary time, that record would have generated support for the congressmen and women who made it."

He acknowledged, however, "This is not ordinary time, and on Tuesday the voters reflected their frustration with the pace of change and the messy and often, to them, almost revolting process by which it was made."

Clinton, who leaves today for the Philippines and the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in Indonesia, identified trade as one area in which he hoped Republicans and Democrats could work together. Speaking almost wistfully, he said passage of implementing legislation for the North American Free Trade Agreement was "our greatest moment of bipartisan cooperation in the last Congress."

White House officials are hoping foreign policy will offer Clinton a way to shine as his dealings with Congress become more difficult.

Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Republicans had made some "encouraging" comments about working with the White House since the elections, and she said their actions on the trade agreement "will be the first case" to test their approach.

Clinton called the trade pact "the key link to free trade, more open societies and economic growth all around this world."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., an outspoken critic, managed to put off a Senate vote on the agreement until after the elections and the House followed suit. Many Republicans and Democrats maintain GATT would create jobs in the United States, but there are concerns on both sides of the aisle about whether the World Trade Organization would infringe on U.S. sovereignty.

EPA delays OK on emissions plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is giving automakers and Northeast states more time to develop a compromise plan for reducing automobile emissions.

The EPA announced Thursday that it was delaying for a month a decision on whether to approve a plan submitted by a dozen states from Virginia to Maine. The states say the auto pollution controls are needed for the region to meet federal air quality requirements in the coming years.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner said at a news conference that the decision on the Northeast states' petition was being delayed until mid-December because the agency needed more time to review public comments on the plan.

But she also acknowledged the additional time will give negotiators more time to work on a possible alternative plan that would not only reduce pollution in the Northeast, but also lead to cleaner-burning cars in other parts of the country as well. The aim is a plan acceptable to automakers as well as the states.

For Bush brothers, crime issue sticks in Texas, fails in Florida

George W. Bush, left, and Jeb Bush, above, made crime a key point in their campaigns for governor seats. For George, it worked with Texas voters. Florida voters were less responsive.

MIAMI — On the stump and in the debates, the Bush brothers — George W. in Texas and Jeb in Florida — sounded carbon-copy themes.

Crooks terrorize the streets. Juvenile criminals sneer at authority. Welfare spending is out of control. Government is too fat. Schools don't teach. Praise God. Time for change.

In Texas, George W. Bush, 48, the oldest son of former President George Bush, won a surprisingly easy election, collecting nearly 54 percent of the vote against Democrat Ann Richards, a self-styled good old gal.

In Florida, brother Jeb, 41, the second son, lost in one of the state's closest-ever races to Democratic incumbent Lawton Chiles, a self-styled good old boy.

Interviews with voters and an analysis of election results offer no single answer. But clues can be found in the details.

Exit polls in each state suggest that a quirky calculus was at work benefiting George W. in Texas and hampering Jeb in Florida.

A combination of little things — the diverse opinions of men and women voters, varying levels of concern over crime and education, the presence of older voters in Florida and their absence in Texas, and just plain political philosophy — made the difference.

In both states, for example, voters cited crime as the most important concern. And in both, the Bush brothers hammered the incumbents over their handling of it.

But only in Texas did that attack have significant effect.

Of those Texans who said crime was their chief concern, 3 of 5 voted for George W., exit polling indicated.

By contrast, of those Floridians who said the same thing, half still sided with Chiles, indicating that Jeb's attacks failed to stick.

Both brothers also argued for radical changes in their states' education policies, but to widely different results. In Texas, 1 of 3 voters polled said education was a key issue.

Yet Richards and Bush split those votes, leaving it a wash.

The situation was far more divisive in Florida, where Jeb Bush's plan to let parents use public funds for private school tuition was regarded as a serious threat to the future of public education.

Of the Floridians who listed this as a critical concern, 3 out of 5 surveyed voted for Chiles.

Gender also played a critical role.

Texas women failed to rally heavily to Richards' side, the polls indicated. She beat George W. by only 52 percent to 48 percent among female voters.

Men, meanwhile, voted lopsidedly for Bush, giving him a 59 percent-to-41 percent result.

In Florida, there was virtually no gender gap. The Miami Herald's exit poll, conducted by Witofsky International among 1,067 voters, indicated Jeb Bush winning just 51 percent of the male vote to Chiles' 49 percent, a statistical tie in a poll with a 3 percent error margin.

In addition, the pair were tied among women.

The prevailing political philosophy in Texas may also have worked more to George W.'s advantage than did the philosophy of Floridians. When voters in Texas were asked to characterize themselves as liberal, moderate or conservative, 42 percent chose conservative. Just 18 percent said they were liberal, and 40 percent labeled themselves moderate.

Mom remorseful over sons' deaths

UNION, S.C. (AP) — Susan Smith has expressed "great remorse" to her jailers for drowning her two young sons, a source said.

The law enforcement source, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, gave no details of Mrs. Smith's emotional state as she remains in isolation in prison, charged with two counts of murder.

Neither her attorney nor corrections officials would comment. A judge has asked officials to keep silent about details of the case.

Mrs. Smith confessed to letting her car roll down a boat ramp into a lake while 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex Smith were strapped in their safety seats. The confession on Nov. 3 came nine days after she reported the boys were kidnapped by a black carjacker.

She made a spoken confession, then a slightly different written one, The State newspaper-in-Columbia reported, citing anonymous law enforcement sources. In the first, she told police her oldest son woke up when the interior light came on as she stepped from her car at John D. Long Lake on Oct. 25.

"She got out of that car and the older little boy woke up — his eyes popped open and he started struggling to get out of the car seat," the source said. "And she let the car roll down to the water. She didn't stand up there and watch the kids flailing."

Newsweek magazine, in its Nov. 14 issue, also reported that Mrs. Smith watched Michael struggle to get out of his safety seat. But the account was denied by her lawyer, David Bruck, and State Law Enforcement Division Chief Robert Stewart.

Law enforcement sources disagreed today on how the confession was obtained.

On the morning Mrs. Smith confessed, investigators said they couldn't prove she killed the children. So Union County Sheriff Howard Wells threatened to tell the media about inconsistencies in her story. The State quoted one of its sources as saying:

"Of course, he couldn't do that. He bluffed her. She broke down," the newspaper's source said.

A law enforcement source who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity said no such bluff or threat occurred.

Days before the arrest, Wells had already told at least one newspaper that Mrs. Smith's story had inconsistancies.

And there were published reports quoting sources as saying that she failed one lie detector test and had trouble on the second when asked, "Do you know where the children are?"

Pentagon plans morale boost with money for housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Aiming to boost morale for troops sent increasingly on risky missions abroad, the Pentagon's top leaders said Thursday they'll pump $2.7 billion more into military housing, cost-of-living allowances and programs such as child care.

"No weapon system is better than the people who operate and maintain it. It is crucial that we put people first in our priorities," Defense Secretary William Perry said at a Pentagon briefing.

Perry said he did not devise the plan with the expectation that additional funds will come from the new Republican majority in Congress. He said the money will come from cuts in long-term programs to modernize certain weapons, but he declined to specify which ones.

The Pentagon is considering amending or canceling several major weapons programs, including a new submarine for the Navy, the Marines' V-22 tilt-rotor aircraft, the Army's Comanche helicopter and the Air Force's F-22 futuristic jet fighter.

AP photo

Joint Chiefs Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili, left, looks on as Defense Secretary William Perry announces the Defense Department will add $2.7 billion over six years into military housing, cost-of-living allowances and other programs.

Perry said he intends to announce those decisions sometime next month.

Perry, joined at the briefing by Gen. John Shalikashvili, said the Pentagon is recommending that $450 million be spent each year over the next six years to improve conditions for the force of 1.6 million men and women. Some spending will begin within months, particularly to upgrade dilapidated housing that would otherwise have been closed for lack of maintenance money, he said.

That amounts to about a 5 percent increase in spending over what has been designated for "quality of life" programs in the Pentagon's annual budget, which totaled $244 billion this year.

Perry noted that he was told during a recent visit to Europe about increased rates of spousal and child abuse among military families. He said some Air Force units are being deployed away from home at a rate four times higher than in 1989.

Shalikashvili, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the new spending is necessary, given the turbulence created by the troop and budget cuts that the military has endured over the past several years.

—The emphasis being placed on people is essential to maintain morale and to recruit top-quality soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines, even as the pared-down military is being sent abroad more often, Shalikashvili said.

"Our forces are very heavily engaged. ... People are key to readiness. And no size investment that we make is more important than the investment in our people," he said.

Both men stressed that the problems of improving the quality of life for the troops cannot be addressed in one year. Such spending must be maintained to improve the situation for troops worldwide, they said.

Perry's plan for fiscal 1996, which begins Oct. 1, 1995, includes:

• Spending $296 million on family housing worldwide. The budget includes upgrades on about 10,000 homes that are threatened with closure because of lack of maintenance and improvements in some 5,000 barracks spaces for singles.

Damage control

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Democrats who think it can't get any worse for their party after this week's election wipeout: Think again.

Party leaders and strategists are poring through the results and exit polls much like investigators sift through the wreckage of a crashed plane, desperately searching for clues to the disaster.

The early findings are troubling, as evidence mounts that the party's decades-old New Deal coalition may be fractured beyond repair.

"In all our lifetimes, none of us have ever been faced with anything like this," said Democratic strategist Donald Switzer. "We have a lot of fixing to do."

For starters, President Clinton's re-election campaign is right around the corner and the White House political shop is in shambles after an election in which very little went right. Also, the Democratic National Committee is without a chairman beginning Friday.

And the grip Democrats had on Congress for 40 years is gone — and with it the leverage the party and its individual lawmakers had to raise millions of dollars from organizations and interest groups that are ideologically aligned with Republicans.

"Most of the big money follows the power," acknowledged Steve Jost, a Democratic fund-raiser.

As Democrats address those structural and financial troubles, some see opportunity in the ashes, arguing that Democrats had become lazy and arrogant.

"In a way we are liberated," said Jost. "As the opposition, we get to throw the grenades instead of getting hit with them."

Jost said Democrats must learn from Republicans and build a base of smaller donors to replace big contributions that will be harder to come by without congressional control.

> 'You can't win if your base is 25 percent of the electorate.'
> — Al From, president of the Democratic Leadership Council

Republicans use liberals like Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders as targets to raise millions in small donations of $25 or so; Democrats are planning to do the same using North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms and House Speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich as their rallying cries.

"We do have some new monsters to talk about," Sweitzer said.

One of Tuesday's survivors, Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, called the results "a severe, sharp and obvious repudiation of the president."

Remarks like that, and the rush of Democrats to bash Clinton in their campaigns brought this parting advice from DNC Chairman David Wilhelm: "Democrats have more to learn about governing with unity and discipline."

Some liberals argue Clinton needs to confront the new GOP congressional leadership and push for economic stimulus, pro-labor initiatives and new investments in cities and infrastructure.

"You can't keep on running from labor, running from blacks, running from cities and expect to inspire them to vote," Jesse Jackson said in an interview. He has not ruled out a 1996 primary challenge if Clinton moves toward the middle, as the president himself said Wednesday he was inclined to do.

It is an extraordinary dilemma: expanding a political base without losing what you have. But Clinton's solid support is now in the 37 percent range, down from the 43 percent he got in 1992, so he may have little choice but to try.

"You can't win if your base is 25 percent of the electorate," said Democratic Leadership Council president Al From, an advocate of the centrist approach who called Jackson's strategy "the path to extinction."

While they and others fiercely debate how to build from defeat, there is no dispute the party faces giant hurdles — not only in winning back the loyalty of the middle class and independent-minded voters who sided with Republicans this year, but also in keeping its traditional base.

In Michigan, for example, the state AFL-CIO president handpicked the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Howard Wolpe. But GOP Gov. John Engler got 46 percent support from union households.

In neighboring Ohio, GOP Gov. George Voinovich got 58 percent support from union households — and 40 percent of the black vote. Nationally, 40 percent of those in union households voted Republican in House races, according to exit polls.

Among blacks the figure was just 8 percent nationally in House races, but California Gov. Pete Wilson garnered 21 percent of the black vote, and George W. Bush got 15 percent in defeating Texas Democratic Gov. Ann Richards.

"It proves that when our candidates make the effort they can win African-American votes," said former GOP Housing Secretary Jack Kemp.

As Clinton begins to look for a new party chairman, he might not have the free hand generally afforded presidents. State party leaders are furious at Wilhelm's treatment by the White House, and place a good deal of the blame for Tuesday's losses on the president.

"We expect to be consulted," said Texas state chairman Bob Slagle.

County settles in sexual harassment suit

SPOKANE (AP) — A 2-year-old sexual harassment claim that led to a Spokane County administrator's resignation and new employee policies has been settled for $13,000.

Officials said the result was worth the more than $280,000 the county spent to defend against the lawsuit.

"I'm relieved; I'm glad it's over with," said Commissioner Steve Hasson, who was targeted in the complaints. "We spent what we needed to defend the integrity of the system. There wasn't a whole lot of merit to this lawsuit and now we see that."

Report shows more teens overweight

ATLANTA (AP) — One in five U.S. teens is overweight, the government reported Thursday, and experts are blaming everything from too much junk food and TV to lack of exercise and baggy, figure-concealing grunge clothing.

Through the 1970s, the percentage of overweight children ages 12 to 19 held steady at around 15 percent, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. But that rate had jumped to 21 percent by 1991.

The increase was not much of a surprise because the CDC had previously tracked a similar trend among overweight adults, from 25 percent to 33 percent, said Jeffrey Lancashire of the CDC's National Center for Health Statistics.

"We all — adults, adolescents and young children — eat in the same environment and have access to the same healthy and unhealthy foods," he said.

But while baby fat can melt away as a child's hormones shift into adolescent overdrive, too many overweight teens end up struggling with their weight the rest of their lives.

"We know that at least some of these overweight adolescents will grow up to be overweight adults," Lancashire said. That means they will also run a higher risk of heart disease, diabetes and arthritis.

The report didn't examine by how much the teens were overweight, or how much body fat they had — a key indicator of health.

What caused the increase among overweight teens also isn't clear, Lancashire said, though other studies point to too much fat and sugar in children's diets and a sedentary life spent in front of the television.

Lancashire said the CDC would prefer to encourage exercise rather than dieting, for fear teen-agers will go overboard.

"Unlike with adults, we have to be careful about instructing adolescents to go on diets," he said.

Aging baby boomers won't explode health-care costs

It's the year 2025, and America is a vast nursing home.

The sheer weight of the aging baby boom – 55 million strong – has shredded the social safety net, and every 100 people of working age are supporting 32 elderly citizens, leaving America a bloated version of 20th century Sweden.

Americans are pouring a quarter of their gross domestic product into health care, and of every $1 spent on health-care costs for people over 65, 80 cents comes from the taxpayers.

That leaves a federal budget deficit of $1.2 trillion, and the country is spending three times as much on debt service as it spends on defense.

Sound like Hillary Clinton's worst nightmare? It's actually a scenario that the White House used earlier this year in arguing for the Clinton health care plan.

America must invest in comprehensive national health care reform, the argument went, or we'll beggar our children with the cost of caring for the rest of us in our declining years.

Not necessarily, as it turns out.

A recent article in American Demographics magazine suggests that aging baby-boomers aren't headed for the demographic train wreck that advocates of national health care expect.

It also underscores the danger of government solutions based on assumptions that are compassionate, far-reaching – and wrong.

"When Chicken Little said that the sky was falling, he lost credibility," wrote Charles Longino Jr., a professor of sociology and public health science at Wake Forest University. "The same fate may await those who crow about the demographic imperative without questioning its assumptions."

Longino argues that changes in lifestyle will make the boomers a much healthier generation of senior citizens than their parents and grandparents, which in turn will leave the country facing lower-than-expected health-care costs.

Instead of spending 20 years languishing in a nursing home, Longino says, most boomers will remain independent well into their 70s and 80s because they're in better shape than their parents and better able to manage the financial demands of retirement.

"Incremental increases in Social Security will protect older households from inflation and recessions," Longino said. "Aging baby-boom women will also have resources their mothers never had. Because they delayed marriage and experienced high divorce rates, many have lived independently for years. They are used to keeping their homes, managing their money and tending to emergencies by themselves. Virtually all baby-boom women have worked outside the home for at least part of their lives, and many will have their own pension incomes."

Even for the infirm, assistive devices – ranging from electronic wheelchairs to voice-activated light switches – will allow them to remain in their homes longer.

The upshot is that instead of consuming a quarter of everything this country produces, health care costs may actually flatten out after the turn of the century.

"Americans are notorious for addressing problems only when they become national crises," Longino says. "When the long-term care crisis mounts in the next century, the U.S. public will come to the rescue by advancing policies to reform care-giving. Even in the next decade, we will see policy discussion that will set the stage for those dramatic events."

Whatever the fate of health-care reform in the short run, it's clear the Clinton plan and its clones were ambitious solutions to yesterday's realities, doomed to obsolescence before they became law.

Happily, that approach is doomed to fail in the new Congress, which will give America – and especially the boomers – time to consider health-care reform that fits the way we're going, not the way we were.

Viable health care hidden from public

Robert Moffit

Over the next several weeks, from Nov. 12 through Dec. 12, federal employees will exercise a privilege most other Americans don't have: They'll choose the health-care plan and package of benefits that are best for their families and finances from a wide array of options. Overall, they'll get to choose from some 400 plans nationwide, ranging from traditional "fee for service" insurance to managed care.

What most Americans don't know is that this activity, referred to as "Open Season" under the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP), contains the key to effective health-care reform and should be studied closely by the new 104th Congress.

At least rhetorically, everyone from President and Mrs. Clinton to some Republican leaders in Congress recognized this when they talked about "giving all Americans the same reliable health-care plan Congress has" during the debate last summer.

But instead of incorporating FEHBP's principles of consumer choice and market competition into their own plans, the president and his allies merely asserted that their big-government schemes were "just like what Congress has."

They had good reasons for doing this. FEHBP has a proven track record of containing health-care costs. But the real reason they wanted you and me to believe their plans were like FEHBP was also the health-care debate's best-kept secret: There really was a plan before Congress that would have provided all Americans with the same broad range of choices federal employees enjoy.

Unfortunately, the supporters of Clinton-style health-care reform didn't want you to find out about it.

That's right. If ordinary citizens knew there was a proposal that would allow them to choose from a wide variety of health plans and benefits packages – a proposal that would encourage greater industry competition and therefore hold prices down — they would have been even more opposed to government-run health care than they already were.

Of course, you rejected their plans anyway. But by the time FEHBP's virtues had been politically co-opted by virtually every health-care reform plan in Congress, the waters were too muddy for people to see that there really was a good plan out there.

Waiting in the wings during the entire debate – and ignored by most of the major media – was the Consumer Choice Health Security Act, sponsored by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., and Rep. Cliff Stearns, R-Fla., and co-sponsored by 24 other members of the Senate.

Nickles-Stearns would have given American families the same range of personal choice and the kind of consumer-driven system that members of Congress and federal workers have.

There are lots of similarities between FEHBP and Nickles-Stearns. First, no one would be restricted to a "standardized" package of health-care benefits, or a single plan chosen by the government or an employer. Under the Nickles-Stearns bill, people could choose from a wide variety of plans and health-benefits packages in a system based on genuine consumer choice.

Second, like FEHBP, Nickles-Stearns would let people decide if a health plan is a good value, or if it's too expensive. Families could then pocket the savings they get from prudent health-care shopping. Even better, they could open up tax-free medical savings accounts, rolling the money over year after year and paying doctors for routine medical services out of these accounts.

Third, the consumer choice plan, like FEHBP, would be relatively free of government bureaucracy, regulation and price controls. Premiums, co-insurance and deductibles would be set not by the government but by the market.

Finally, just as federal workers get help in buying their health plans – the government pays approximately 72 percent of FEHBP premiums – under Nickles-Stearns people would get tax credits or vouchers to help them buy insurance and help offset out-of-pocket expenses. The generosity of this tax relief would depend on family need.

After all, it is market competition – insurance companies competing directly for consumer dollars – that makes FEHBP work so well. In 1995, the Office of Personnel Management has announced, premiums federal employees pay actually will decline by 3.4 percent. This year, 40 percent of FEHBP enrollees saw a decrease in their premiums.

Maybe that's why the White House and its congressional allies like FEHBP so much – for themselves. But if they really wanted consumer choice for the rest of America, they would have endorsed Nickles-Stearns this summer. Instead, virtually all the Clinton-style plans falsely donned the mantle of FEHBP while shunning the only real consumer-choice plan.

Remember that when the health-care reform debate resumes next year.

Effects of election chilling for African Americans

Acel Moore

For African Americans, the poor and urban dwellers in general, the impact of Tuesday's election is chilling.

Many of the winners in the election were conservative Republicans who very subtly linked race with the key issues in their campaigns. Those issues are welfare reform, crime and tax reduction.

Many white voters certainly tied black faces to those issues as they did to any social programs for urban dwellers.

Republican leaders, including Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who will likely become the first Republican House speaker in four decades in January, have already said that voters have sent a message that they want less government and that government not tangle up business in red tape.

The mood can probably best be seen in the approval of Proposition 187 in California, which will deny education, welfare and other state aid – other than for emergencies – to illegal immigrants.

The results of the elections showed clearly that voters weren't satisfied with either the performance of President Clinton or the Democratic Party.

Voters told the Democrats that they will have to change their ways. They told the Democrats to distance themselves from positions that are considered too liberal, such as universal health care and funding for social programs. They told Clinton and the Democrats to move further to the right.

If the Republican right holds to its campaign rhetoric, then African Americans cannot expect initiatives coming out of Congress that will help them. Charles Murray, co-author of "The Bell Curve," may get his way after all. He has asserted that funding for social programs is a waste of money.

Under the new Republican leadership in Congress, it's almost a certainty that nothing in the way of affirmative action or measures that will help African Americans will be advanced.

What's more likely to come out of the new Republican Congress are the most extreme measures in welfare reform and cuts in all social programs. The impact of the right-wing victory, backed by the religious right, could stifle all progressive initiatives. And the election could have a big impact on the courts, since all federal judgeships have to be confirmed by the Senate.

In addition to their victories in Congress, Republicans have taken control of most of the executive mansions and state houses in the South and in many of the big industrial states in the North.

Tuesday's election, according to Martin Kilson, a political scientist at Harvard University, is a repeat of the election of 1874, which signaled the beginning of the post-Reconstruction period when the Union Army moved out of the South.

In effect, he said, the election results in the South mean that "the Union Army," which went into the South with the Voting Rights Act of 1965, has again pulled out.

Because of the Voting Rights Act, blacks won 11 House seats in the South that had been gerrymandered after the 1990 census. But the victory in districting was a double-edged sword. As a result, blacks were taken out of neighboring districts, which helped Republicans make substantial gains on Tuesday. Blacks had been a moderating influence in those districts before redistricting.

It could be argued that not all was lost for African Americans on Tuesday. J.C. Watts became the first black elected to Congress from Oklahoma. That's the good news.

The bad news is that Watts appears to be somewhere to the right of Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas. Watts, a former quarterback at the University of Oklahoma, is against affirmative action and social programs of any sort.

Unfortunately for black Democrats (and any Americans living in poverty in the cities), they are probably better off now than they ever will be after Newt Gingrich and his gang take over, next January.

Veterans deserve a thank-you

Veteran's Day used to be a time of recognition for the many men and women who answered the call of their country and served one and all to guarantee the freedoms our Revolutionary War veterans fought for. Now it seems hard to even get much beyond all the businesses who claim they are "honoring" veterans with their big sale of the week.

Odds are you have a member or members of your family who would not mind a kind comment, a thank you, a hug or a "thinking of you" card. If that individual is a shut-in or in nursing care, then a personal visit would be super.

It is easy to forget about what someone did years ago. Many combat veterans choose not to talk about the death and destruction they've witnessed. They'll still appreciate a kind word or whatever. The American Legion Post in Gooding is happy to sponsor the annual veterans' dinner here and let these men, women and family members know we still remember, we care and you're among friends.

If you have family members in service now, why not send them a card or letter and a snapshot. They'd enjoy hearing from you. All soldiers enjoy hearing from home. I can tell you from 3½ years overseas experience that it is a joy to get those pieces of mail.

Sometime when you are in Boise, Pocatello or Lewiston, maybe you'll take a moment out of your schedule and stop by the veterans' home there. Sit a moment with someone, share a conversation and learn what that veteran went through. They would sure love you for it.

Mystery debt puzzles veteran

Recently I received correspondence from the Department of Defense notifying me that I owed the federal government $12,770.64. No explanation was given, and review of the "account statement" was not only unrevealing but also gave the distinct impression that this "debt" had no history. It had apparently materialized out of thin air.

After more than three weeks, an inquiry filed by Sen. Larry Craig's office has failed to elicit any response whatsoever. I am in no way faulting Sen. Craig's office and have received nothing but courteous, expeditious service, but the more I've thought about this, the more puzzled and irritated I've become.

I am a veteran of four years in the U.S. Army. I hold two military occupational specialities, and I have never received any type of enlistment bonus. The Montgomery GI Bill is the only monetary benefit I have received, and I have maintained a 3.4 grade-point average while using it. I was honorably discharged, and my eight-year obligation ended on Nov. 9, 1989.

Review of my pay records has shed no light on the matter, and I have been left shaking my head in confusion.

I do find it suspicious that the venerable Department of Defense waited until less than a month before my final discharge to notify me of the supposed debt.

If you or someone you know has received a similar statement, please notify Sen. Craig's office before you even consider paying. The Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 gives these people the authority to take your tax refund for amounts owed to the U.S. Government, so please do not just ignore this.

I gave my country four years of my life, and this is its idea of gratitude? To speak plainly, it makes me mad as hell!

Ukraine leader starts economic surgery

KIEV, Ukraine — The price of bread quadrupled Thursday as President Leonid Kuchma announced he'd begun "surgery" on Ukraine's ailing economy.

"The patient is now on the operating table," he said.

Free-market prices are a key element of Kuchma's plan to reduce the budget deficit by spending less on government subsidies.

A loaf of bread in Ukraine now costs about 10 cents.

Kuchma has also cut government subsidies to the transport and energy sectors, sending prices soaring five- to ten-fold. But parliament gave Kuchma some breathing room Wednesday, voting down a Communist-backed proposal to suspend price hikes.

Immigration smuggling ring exposed

HONG KONG — In a joint operation with U.S. officials, immigration officers arrested 13 people involved with a syndicate that has been smuggling Chinese into the United States.

A government statement Thursday said the detainees include three Hong Kong members of the syndicate and 10 Chinese nationals who arrived in the colony as visitors.

It said 14 more people were arrested in New York in simultaneous raids by officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The syndicate arranged for Chinese residents to use false travel documents to enter the United States via Hong Kong, it said.

Israel sends medical aid to Gaza Strip

JERUSALEM — The growing number of cholera cases in the PLO-run Gaza Strip prompted Israel to send medical aid Thursday to help test and treat patients with the contagious disease.

At least 25 cholera patients were being treated on isolation wards in Gaza hospitals, an increase from 20 cases Wednesday. Over 200 people have been tested.

"We are announcing an emergency in all health departments in the Gaza Strip," said Dr. Riad Zanoun, health minister in the Palestinian Authority, who requested medical assistance from Israel.

Despite the death of a 30-month old child on Monday and the increase in cases, an Israeli medical official assisting Gaza doctors said the disease was not widespread.

Naval officer found guilty of harassment

Nationalist defectors create political force

MOSCOW — While Vladimir Zhirinovsky toured the United States, defectors from his ultranationalist party were busy Thursday forming a new political faction.

The People's Capital has already signed up 16 deputies, most of them from Zhirinovsky's Liberal Democratic Party, Alexei Mitrofanov, the LDP's deputy leader, said at a news conference.

Joining Mitrofanov at the conference was Sergei Mavrodi, the head of an investment fund that is accused of having defrauded millions of people.

Mavrodi spent four months in jail for tax evasion and obstructing an investigation into his business holdings. Two weeks after he was released, Mavrodi was elected to the State Duma on Oct. 30 in a special election to fill the seat of a parliament deputy who was murdered last summer. He remains under investigation.

Hezbollah claims fatal bomb in Lebanon

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon — Shiite Muslim guerrillas detonated a remote-controlled roadside bomb in an Israeli-occupied enclave of south Lebanon Thursday, killing one person and wounding another.

The Lebanese security sources in the so-called "security zone" said the victims belonged to the South Lebanon Army, a 2,500-man militia trained, equipped and financed by Israel.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the blast ripped through an SLA mechanized patrol near the village of Kfar Houna in the eastern sector of the security zone.

The bombing was claimed by Hezbollah, or Party of God, Iran's main ally in Lebanon that is leading a guerrilla war to dislodge Israel from the enclave.

Border-crossing runs into a wall

An unidentified Mexican from Jalisco state crosses the border under a 'steel-wall,' called the 'Berlin wall,' between Tijuana, Mexico, and San Diego, Calif., early Tuesday morning.

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Her gray hair shining in the light of a butane lamp, Esperanza Medina hugs her two grandchildren as she sells food to a handful of men waiting by a fire to climb a steel fence.

Under her green tent, business is down.

It has to do with California's passage of Proposition 187, which cuts benefits to illegal immigrants, as well as with the "militarization" of the border: a fence derisively called the Berlin Wall; Border Patrol agents armed with infrared goggles, the National Guard, floodlights and helicopters.

"There is such injustice for poor Mexicans who want to find work in the United States," she said. "It looks like they don't want us."

Her sentiments are echoed throughout this nation of 80 million following Tuesday's vote approving the measure, which could cut welfare benefits to illegal immigrants, including schooling and health care.

Medina sells instant soup, cigarettes, soft drinks and even plastic bags — to be worn as boots — to Mexicans who flock to the fence and cross into California, a long, perilous journey that is becoming harder every day.

Medina isn't making much money these days. She used to sell 50 ham sandwiches a night. Now she can't even sell 10.

The Border Patrol says more than 1 million were apprehended in fiscal 1993, compared with about 861,000 in fiscal 1994, which ended in September.

"Before, I took people across the border every night," said "Muffler," a so-called coyote, or smuggler, who charges up to $200 a person for a ride to Los Angeles.

Fidgety, with a toothpick in his mouth, "Muffler," who says his real name is Juan Coronado, has been a coyote for five years. Now he's helping build a Chinese restaurant with a friend. He's a little bored.

"I'll just wait for things to calm down and go back to my old business," he said. "I know how to do it. It's better than stealing."

Not many here believe Mexicans will stop going to the United States just because of Proposition 187. Even though they often work for less than the U.S. minimum wage, they still make more money than they would at home. Common jobs for the illegal immigrants are picking fruit, working in construction or restaurants, mowing lawns or cleaning houses.

They do anything, anywhere, from California to Nevada, Oregon, Utah and even the East Coast. And many pay taxes and social security, money they never claim.

About half of the 1 million illegal Mexican immigrants estimated to be in the United States use Tijuana as their crossing point.

"If it gets too hard to cross through Tijuana, they will find other smaller border towns to go across," said Victor Clark, an anthropologist who heads the independent Binational Center for Human Rights. "Besides, we still have to see if 187 will actually be put into action."

The motion is to be appealed.

What worries most Mexicans about the proposition is that it may increase discrimination against Hispanics and Mexico in general.

German authorities ban neo-Nazi organization

BONN, Germany (AP) — In the sharpest blow against the fascist movement in months, the government outlawed a paramilitary neo-Nazi organization Thursday and police seized knives, propaganda and bank accounts in nationwide raids.

The group, Viking Youth, is the fourth fascist organization banned by the federal government in two years.

No arrests were reported.

Federal Interior Minister Manfred Kanther said Thursday that Viking Youth wants to restore a fascist state in which Jews would be forced to wear yellow stars and people the extremists considered "inferior beings" would be sterilized.

The group has been giving paramilitary training to young Germans and teaching them neo-Nazi beliefs, Kanther said.

According to the Interior Ministry, group members idolize Adolf Hitler and see themselves as successors of the Hitler Youth, a Nazi-era youth organization.

Led by 30-year-old Wolfram Nahrath, called the "federal fuehrer," the Viking Youth has about 400 members, federal authorities said.

Dieter Heckelmann, Berlin's interior minister, said the group has linked between members of neo-Nazi groups that have previously been banned. He said Viking Youth is part of a network of "right-wing extremists and neo-Nazis whose ties to one another are growing."

Kanther said there is no place in Germany for "groups like the Viking Youth that propagate racism and anti-Semitism and teach youths to be violent, intolerant and to hate democracy."

Money belonging to Viking Youth was confiscated in a raid on Nahrath's Berlin apartment, officials said.

Defense requests light sentence for spy

DUSSELDORF, Germany (AP) — The defense pleaded for leniency Thursday for an ex-communist mole who has admitted betraying NATO military secrets while working at the alliance's Brussels headquarters for 12 years.

Rainer Rupp, code-named Topaz, is accused of treason. Prosecutors say that while working at NATO from 1977 to 1989, Rupp gave his East German handlers more secrets than any other West German turncoat.

Rupp's attorney, Klaus Schroth, told the court: "I can only clasp my hands together and beg you for leniency."

The prosecution has asked for a 15-year sentence. But Schroth said it should be far less than that.

Judge calls Russia court system weak

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's legal system is weak from top to bottom, leading to an erosion of governmental authority, a top judge said Thursday.

The country's constitutional court has been suspended for over a year and no system has been set up to try lawsuits brought by individuals against officials and government bodies.

Vladimir Tumanov, a new member of the constitutional court, said that even government officials often ignore court rulings, and the judiciary has a long way to go before becoming a strong, independent branch of power.

"Fulfillment of the courts' decisions remains a major problem," he told reporters. "The government must realize that the failure to ensure the execution of the court's ruling erodes its own authority."

Russia has a new constitution and a new parliament, but most of its judges date from Soviet times and are often heavily influenced by local authorities.

Officials in many of Russia's 89 regions also often violate federal laws, passing contradicting legislation, and the central government doesn't move to settle these conflicts.

Tumanov said that reform of the judiciary has been slow and haphazard. Jury trials, abolished after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, were introduced in some regions beginning late last year, and remain only experimental.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Francois Devance was 11 years old when he left Haiti, and U.S. soldiers were occupying his country.

They were there again when he returned Thursday, six decades later.

"I thank God that I'm back in my country," said Devance, 74, who flew home from Cuba with 150 Haitian refugees, most of whom had fled poverty and repression under old military regimes. The United Nations arranged their return on a Cuban airliner, one of three U.N flights this week carrying Haitian refugees who fled by boat to Cuban shores.

Thousands of Haitians, reassured by President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's Oct. 15 return, are heading home from the U.S. Navy Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and other Caribbean nations.

When Devance left Haiti in 1931, the United States was policing the Caribbean island. After a Haitian mob lynched an unpopular president in 1915, U.S. troops arrived to restore order and enforce the country's financial obligations to American creditors. They left in 1934.

Thousands of U.S. soldiers came back in September to help restore the elected government of President Aristide, who was ousted in a September 1991 military coup.

Devance, who brought only a sack and a battered green suitcase, had little to say about the U.S. presence.

"I believe only in myself," said Devance, chewing on a ham and cheese sandwich before going through immigration. "I don't want anything to do with that."

U.S. soldiers, who have been disarming the paramilitary groups that terrorized Haiti, are far more popular than they were during their last visit, when they killed thousands of Haitian rebels. Today, "U.S.A. for 50 years," is a common piece of graffiti on walls around the capital.

Devance, who speaks a mix of Creole and Spanish, said he and his family left Haiti by boat with only a few pennies, lured by rumors of easy money in Cuba. But in the end he said he was disappointed.

"There was a rumor that there was a lot of money in Cuba, money in the street, money on the floor," he said. But in the end, "I did nothing in Cuba."

Claude Riviere, of the Haitian Red Cross, said he was doubtful Devance would adapt to life in Haiti because he doesn't have family or friends and "doesn't know the system."

Iraq drops claims on Kuwait

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq abandoned territorial claims to Kuwait that had origins in the Ottoman Empire Thursday, hoping to win an end to trade sanctions that have strangled its economy.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the National Assembly voted for "Iraq's recognition of the sovereignty of the state of Kuwait, its territorial integrity and independence."

The statement also said Iraq recognized and respected the "inviolability" of new Kuwaiti borders, demarcated by a U.N. committee after the 1991 Gulf War.

Saddam Hussein's ruling Revolutionary Command Council later endorsed the legislation, according to a dispatch by the agency, monitored in Cyprus.

There was no official reaction from Kuwait, where distrust of Iraq runs deep since it invaded the emirate in August 1990. That wariness intensified last month when Baghdad sent tens of thousands of soldiers to the emirate's border.

The White House welcomed the measure as a promising first step but said it wasn't enough to earn Washington's support for lifting the sanctions, imposed to punish Iraq for invading Kuwait.

The emirate was part of Iraq under the Ottoman Empire, which collapsed at the end of World War I. The British, who took over that region, gave Kuwait independence in 1961, and the border had been in dispute since.

The Revolutionary Command Council said Iraq's move was designed "to stress its resolve to comply with all relevant U.N. Security Council resolutions, prove its peaceful intentions and dedication to regional stability and security."

The statement, signed by Saddam, said the decision was effective immediately, the news agency reported.

If Kuwaiti recognition is "true in practice as well as in words, that's positive," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said. "But there are a number of other elements to the U.N. resolutions that Iraq must adhere to before we can even discuss lifting the sanctions."

Iraq, she said, has to permanently stop threatening Kuwait's borders and stop talking about Kuwait as the 19th province, she said.

The United States has also insisted that Baghdad dismantle its weapons program, release political prisoners and return property seized from Kuwait.

Iraq's parliamentary session was attended by Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev of Russia, who has been working with Baghdad to try to get sanctions relaxed.

"Let us not forget that there is a wall of ice surrounding Iraq, intended to isolate it, but the sun has now risen to melt this ice," INA quoted Kozyrev as saying after the recognition decision was announced.

65,000 flee Sudan to escape civil war

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — About 65,000 people were reported fleeing their homes in southern Sudan to escape increased fighting in their nation's 12-year-old civil war.

An estimated 50,000 Sudanese were believed traveling through jungles in the south in hopes of crossing into Uganda, Ulf Kristoffersson, Kampala representative of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said Thursday. He said his agency was stockpiling food in Uganda to prepare for the new arrivals.

The week-old fighting near the Sudanese border town of Nimule, 200 miles north of Kampala, is the latest confrontation between the Khartoum government and the southern rebel Sudanese People's Liberation Army.

Uganda already is home to about 250,000 Sudanese, who have fled since the war began in 1983 between the mainly Arab and Muslim north and the black, animist and Christian south.

Government offices close for Veterans Day

TWIN FALLS – City and county government offices will be closed today in honor of Veterans Day, but trash collection will still be provided by PSI Waste Systems.

Other banks, stores and offices may have special hours for the federal holiday.

The American Veterans Post 27 will be putting on a program today at the Twin Falls City Park. The ceremony will begin at 11 a.m. with Cliff Jones as the master of ceremonies.

The speaker will be Art Frantz with Jim Wilkers will be the participating clergy. Four law enforcement officers will put up the flag.

Veterans from all local veteran organizations will participate in the firing squad.

Commission cancels Star Falls hydroelectric project

MURTAUGH – A proposed hydroelectric project at Star Falls has been nixed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

B&C Energy Inc. of Twin Falls was denied a license to build a dam at one of the last free-flowing waterfalls on the middle Snake River. According to a FERC news release, the proposal was rejected on grounds that it would harm wildlife and diminish the area's scenic beauty and historic character.

The plan was opposed by the state of Idaho and many environmental groups. If built, the project would have blocked the river with a 20-foot-high, 400-foot-long concrete dam upstream of the 35-foot waterfall near Murtaugh. The dam would have created a 3.3-mile-long, 135-acre slack water reservoir.

A 1,220-foot long 24-foot diameter buried pipe would have taken water from the dam to an underground power house below Star Falls. It would have generated 26.8 megawatts of electrical power.

Vandalism plagues three neighborhoods in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS – Vandalism ranging from broken vehicle windows to spray-painting private property have troubled the Desert View, Heatherwood and Spring Creek areas for the past week, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

The crimes are believed to have been committed between 11 p.m. and 2 a.m. by juveniles or young adults, the department said.

If anyone has information about the crimes, please contact Crime Stoppers at 736-2218. Callers may remain anonymous and could receive an award of up to $1,000.

Twin Falls woman charged with drunken driving

TWIN FALLS – A 38-year-old Twin Falls woman was charged with drunken driving and leaving the scene of an accident after a man was thrown from her vehicle on Jefferson Street late Tuesday, according to a Twin Falls Police report.

Mary Rodriguez was traveling west on Borah Avenue at about 10:50 p.m., and when she quickly turned onto Jefferson Street, 38-year-old Joseph Stephen Rodriguez of Twin Falls went out of the vehicle and was left lying on a curb and street, according to the report.

Joseph Stephen Rodriguez was taken by ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for treatment. Mary Rodriguez also was charged with failure to purchase a drivers license.

Republican legislators plan town meetings Saturday

JEROME – Three Republican legislators are holding town meetings in Jerome and Rupert on Saturday. State Reps. Steve Antone and Maxine Bell and Sen. Dean Cameron will be on hand at the Rupert County Courthouse from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

Then, they'll head west to the Jerome County Courthouse for a meeting in the basement meeting hall. That session runs from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Boy Scouts will collect canned goods for charities

TWIN FALLS – Local Boy Scouts are collecting canned goods for those in need. The scouts dropped off plastic sacks at thousands of homes across the Magic and Wood River valleys last Saturday.

This Saturday, from 9 a.m. until noon, they'll be picking up those plastic bags – and distributing the food to local charitable organizations.

For more information on this program, contact a neighborhood boy scout, or call Ray Parrish at the Snake River Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America at 733-2067.

Canal company repairs floodgates

By William Brock
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH – Nearly 90 years after it was installed, a critical flood-control feature on the Twin Falls Canal Co. system is being replaced.

Earlier this month, workers ripped out three large floodgates at the company's "point spill" structure about six miles northwest of Murtaugh. Demolition work began shortly after the canal system was drained.

The replacement project calls for two new metal gates and extensive concrete work – at a total cost of $140,600, said company manager Vince Alberdi.

Simply put, the point spill structure is designed to save the company's bacon in the event of a major canal break. The main canal carries up to 1.61 million gallons of water every minute, which can be a powerful destructive force if it escapes the canal system.

To blunt that threat, the point spill structure is designed to detour five-sixths of the main line canal's water over the edge of the Snake River Canyon, about 400 yards away.

"Every time it's been used, it's been critical," Alberdi said. But the lifting winches were no longer capable of opening the floodgates, he said, "and the last time it was used, we had to use a backhoe to open the gates."

Moreover, the concrete piers that supported the gates were of dubious structural integrity. Alberdi and other company officials feared the piers would crumble if the point spill structure was used again.

"It was a wreck waiting to happen," he said simply.

The magnitude of the problem was revealed when the outlet works were torn out, said former company Engineer Jim Leuze, who was rehired to oversee the point spill project.

"The gates lifted right out and we tapped (a connecting pier) and it fell over with no effort at all," he said. Part of the other concrete pier, which was already cracked, toppled over and shattered without being touched, Leuze added.

"The way that pier went down," Alberdi said, "we could have opened it, but never would have closed it."

"The old expression, 'You've bought the farm,'" would literally have been true."

Renovating – or replacing – the point spill structure has been the company's top priority for years, but the work was put off because it was too overwhelming, Alberdi said.

The company has three other, relatively new, water regulation structures along the main-line canal system. Intake flow can be halted at Milner Dam, where the company diverts water from the Snake River. It can also be shut off with gates at Murtaugh Lake, and at the spot where the main line canal forks into the "high line" and "low line" canals, a few miles south of Hansen.

The new point spill structure will feature two floodgates – each one 18 feet long and more than 13 feet high, Alberdi said. The new gates will be electrically operated; in a couple of years, the gates may be operated by remote control, he said.

Builders turn to multi-family homes

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

'There is a tremendous need for multi-family housing.'

— Lyle Frazier, Raintree Construction

TWIN FALLS – Although construction of single-family dwellings slowed in some areas of Idaho in September, building in Twin Falls and the surrounding counties appears to have dropped only slightly.

There was only a 1.7 percent decrease in dollars spent toward single-family housing construction. But total residential construction jumped 3.3 percent locally, according to First Security Bank's construction report.

This was due to an increase in construction of multi-family residences. In the Magic Valley, 18 new multi-family units were built, compared with four the previous September.

Of the 18 units, 16 were in Twin Falls. That was a 162 percent increase over last year.

"I surveyed the area around Robert Stuart," said Bob Wills of Wills Construction. "There is quite a lot of rental stuff under construction. I don't particularly feel much change in the single family."

Lyle Frazier of Raintree Construction said he still sees a tremendous need for multi-family homes.

"It's a nice increase in multi-family," Frazier said. "There is a tremendous need for multi-family housing."

With the increase in the price range of housing, Frazier said many families can't afford to buy.

"They rent while they save money to buy a home," said Frazier who builds houses in the $130,000 to $200,000 range.

While the increase in multi-family homes appears to have a positive impact, Frazier said that the huge increase in single-family homes over the past year was unhealthy.

In Twin Falls City, 53 more homes were built through September 1994 than last year for the same time period.

"For this size of community, when you increase the number of homes by 53 in one year, there are too many homes built to put on the market. The market can't absorb it."

If this is the case, the slight decline in single-family home construction in September is a good sign. In September 1993 there were five more houses built in Twin Falls than this September.

"The market will soften through the end of the year," Frazier said. But even with the "softening," last year's construction won't be able to catch this year's, he said.

Wills, who builds houses on the less-expensive end of the market, said he has seen no slow-down. The only problem is filling orders for houses $60,000 or under.

"There are quite a lot of houses being sold in the $50,000 range, but they are not new houses," Wills said.

He said he can't build a house for less than $80,000 any more. One reason: a doubling in lot prices.

"The commercial development has made it more expensive for development of subdivisions," Wills said.

Even with the decrease in September, Frazier said that he thinks the market will stay firm for some time.

According to Frazier, "we have to take all the commercial built right now and see how much of that creates new home buyers."

"We are trying to hedge against freezing conditions," he said.

High court will hear big ear case

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Medicaid should pay for plastic surgery on an 8-year-old boy's ears because reducing their size was "medically necessary" to reduce "future psychological damage," says a lawsuit that has reached the Idaho Supreme Court.

The case will be among nine the justices will hear next week when the circuit-riding court visits Twin Falls.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare denied Medicaid coverage to Jeremy Viveros after determining the cosmetic surgery was not medically necessary. Although the malformation of Jeremy's ears didn't affect his hearing, his doctor recommended surgery to reduce their size and reshape them.

Fifth District Judge Daniel B. Meehl upheld the department's decision, so Jeremy – represented by Michael F. McCarthy of Idaho Legal Aid Services – is appealing the case to the Idaho Supreme Court. Arguments will be heard at 8:50 a.m. Tuesday.

The appeal contends the department cannot deny Medicaid coverage for the surgery because it didn't formally adopt a rule defining "medically necessary cosmetic surgery." The appeal also argues the department discriminated against Jeremy because it failed to consider psychological factors.

The State Supreme Court also will again hear arguments at 11:10 a.m. Tuesday on an appeal from Salmon River Canal Co., which was sued by numerous downstream property owners in 1984. The downstream property was flooded after the canal company discharged excessive spring run-off into Salmon Falls Creek when the company's reservoir filled for the first time in its 74-year history.

In 1988, a jury determined the landowners were 20 percent at fault for the damage, and the canal company was 40 percent at

State gives Moore money for job counseling

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

JEROME – With the impending closure of Moore Business Forms early next spring, a $387,586 grant has been awarded for assistance to dislocated workers.

Job Service plans to set up a satellite office at the plant with the grant.

"We'll be providing a number of counseling and guidance services for employees," said Pamela Petersen, manager at Twin Falls Job Service. "We will keep a staff member out there to work one-on-one with employees at their convenience."

The money was provided by the U.S. Department of Labor under the Job Training Partnership Act.

"We are extremely happy to have it. Given our current funding level the state normally receives, there would have been no way we could have extended services we can now," Petersen said.

The funds will be used to allow employees to access a variety of employment and training needs, she said. Money will also be available to employess who want to return to school for specific vocational or academic training.

Petersen said that the funds will be available for an 18-month period.

"We're not looking for a short-term fix for a problem like this," Pejersen said. "That's why we like to work with them early on."

Linda Ekren, human resources representative at Moore Business Forms, said that the satellite office has put help at the employees' fingertips.

"Across the nation companies are downsizing and moving and asking for money from the Department of Labor," Ekren said. "We feel very fortunate to get that amount."

She said the employees are very interested in finishing their education and pursuing retraining. Ekren said she thought quite a few people were taking advantage of it.

Triumph Mine cleanup remains in state's hands

By Barbara Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

TRIUMPH – Residents of this small town are going to have a say in cleanup of mine tailing at the Triumph Mine.

In a meeting in Hailey Thursday, three people were accepted as community liaisons to work with the state Division of Environmental Quality, the state Department of Lands and ASARCO Mining Co. Inc.

The three are Donna Rose, Heide Heath and Pat Murphy. Alternates are Burt Magel, Daphne Coble and Dan Tucker.

After a meeting last week, the cleanup of the lead and arsenic contaminated tailings will remain in the hands of the state. The Environmental Protection Agency had proposed adding the site to its National Priority List, otherwise known as the Superfund List.

Last year, the EPA agreed to turn over the cleanup of the 60 acres to the state. State officials and Triumph residents felt the project could be accomplished sooner and cheaper than a full-blown Superfund cleanup.

But when disagreements arose over management of the cleanup, the Division of Environmental Quality notified EPA last month it was pulling out of the agreement because of a lack of support from Triumph residents and the state Department of Lands.

After last week's meeting between state officials and Triumph residents, the cleanup is back in state hands.

"In order to keep on track, we felt it's the right thing to do to keep it with the state," said Robert Lupton, regional administrator for DEQ.

Estimates range from $3 to $5 million if the state supervises the cleanup but up to $25 million if EPA is in control.

Lupton said DEQ compromised with the residents over the cleanup project manager. Because it is such a small community, the 50 residents of Triumph did not want the full-time project manager stationed there. They also said the job would not warrant a full-time supervisor.

DEQ agreed to hire a project manager in January who will be stationed in Twin Falls. The position will involve duties other than Triumph oversite.

Lupton said he will recommend to the state Department of Lands and ASARCO – the responsible parties for the cleanup project – that the community liaisons be supported in the form of payment for their lost work hours, meals, hourly wages and lodging for work time on the project.

Lupton said that while community liaisons have been appointed, comments are accepted and the public is welcome at meetings.

FCC approves hike in cable rates

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Hoping to spur cable TV companies to add new programming, federal regulators Thursday gave them permission to charge their customers more for new shows than current price regulations permit.

The plan – passed on a rare split vote by the Federal Communications Commission – enables local cable operators to charge each subscriber as much as $1.50 more per month over a two-year period if the companies add up to six new channels to their basic lineups.

Cable companies have been pushing the FCC for months for greater flexibility to raise prices and add channels. They contend that current rules, which were designed to cut basic service charges by as much as 17 percent, provide little financial incentive to expand. As a result, they say they have added few of the 120 or so new cable networks that are spots on the dial.

FCC chairman Reed Hundt, who championed the new pricing plan, said his agency was caught between a desire to keep rates reasonable for the nation's 58 million subscriber households and a desire to encourage more programming.

"As long as people are buying from monopolists, we need to stand between the sellers and the people's pocketbook's," said Hundt, a Democratic appointee, in an interview Thursday.

Cable TV: More channels, higher cost

Cable TV operators have added few additional channels since the industry was regulated. The Federal Communications Commission Thursday adopted a plan that allows cable companies to jack up rates for "expanded basic service" containing additional channels.

Approved Increases

- 1995-1996: up to $1.50 per month
- 1997: another $.20 per month
- 1998: No price increase permitted

Expanded basic services are regulated additions to the lowest-price cable plan, often including MTV, CNN, USA, etc.

AP/Karl Tate

But several parties said that the FCC had not struck the right balance. In the first non-unanimous decision in two years, the commission's two Republican appointees, Andrew Barrett and Rachelle Chong, dissented from the three-member majority.

Both said, in effect, that cable operators should have been given more power to raise prices for new channels. That position was supported by the cable industry's leading companies, which had been seeking twice the incentive that the FCC allowed.

Consumer advocate Bradley Stillman, meanwhile, criticized the FCC plan, saying it undermines the benefits of rate regulation. Stillman, legislative director for the Consumer Federation of America, said the plan leaves subscribers with no choice in the selection of new programming and forces them to pay the additional costs even if they don't want the new channels.

In a related move, the FCC Thursday also permitted cable companies to create new, optional packages of channels and price them at whatever level they choose. This so-called "new service tier" must consist of channels not already available on a cable system, and must be offered as an option, the FCC said.

It's unclear what effect the two plans will have on each of the nation's 11,000 cable systems. Though specific figures are not available, FCC officials said some systems have the ability to add four or five new channels, while some may not be able to add any channels without making a costly investment in new plant and equipment.

Book relates stories of wolves, fires and more in Yellowstone

States News Service

WASHINGTON — In the summer of 1991, fire was burning about 15,000 acres along the Pelican Valley in Yellowstone National Park.

Like they would today, park officials toiled over how to handle not only the flames, but the public and the press that eagerly awaited news of a response.

The National Park Service director at the time, James Ridenour, visited the park and sought the advice of Chief Ranger Dan Sholly.

The two went up in a helicopter and determined the fire moving in the direction of an old, burned-out area where it would surely die on its own.

But in the West, where fire has devastated millions of acres over the years, allowing the flames free reign was — and still is — unacceptable to many.

'Wolves are going to come back to Yellowstone one way or another, it's a given.'

— James Ridenour, former National Park Service director

The ranger told Ridenour he could spend $2 million "to fight it like hell" or he could spend $200,000 "to appear to be fighting it like hell." The fire would burn out either way, clearing the natural litter on the forest floor along the way, Ridenour said.

Ridenour, a supporter of the federal "let it burn" policy, chose the $200,000 solution, and said, "As far as I know, the press never knew and the American taxpayers saved a bunch of money."

Ridenour relayed this anecdote, and many others about Yellowstone fires, wolves and workers, in a book he recently released about his days at the helm of the park service, a federal agency that controls 80 million acres of public land nationwide.

In the book, called "The National Parks Compromised: Pork Barrel Politics and American's Treasures," Ridenour describes the difficulties he faced as the agency's director under President Bush. He shared some predictions for the future of the service, as well as for the U.S. Forest Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Land Management, which collectively control about one-third of the nation.

More than 280 million people visit the parks each year, and Ridenour said the chief is responsible for land-use planning, law enforcement, people management and resource protection.

Yellowstone was chosen as a topic for the book, he said in a recent interview, because it is the flagship national park, created in 1872 when President Ulysses S. Grant signed an act of Congress.

That same year, Grant also signed a mining law making Western land and its minerals cheap and attractive to pioneers. Ironically, mining near Yellowstone, and the broader issue of conservation versus economic development, has become one of the most controversial issues the federal government now has to face.

But in the book, Ridenour said one of the biggest threats to the public land is not mining, grazing or timbering, but inappropriate additions to the park system that are sucking precious dollars away from the agency primary mission of resource protection.

Members of Congress who are more interested in "bringing home the bacon" to their constituents than considering the well-being of the overall system has lead to the overburdened budget which now tops $1 billion a year, but still has understaffed sites and crumbling roads.

Two additions to the system criticized for not fitting the traditional mold of a national park by Ridenour, and many others in Washington, are the Presidio, a former military base in San Francisco, and Steamtown, a collection of old railroad steam engines in Scranton, Pa.

Ridenour said additions such as these are "thinning the blood" of the system. In support of Ridenour, Western lawmakers like retiring Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., consistently voted against any additions to the system, no matter the parcel of land.

Ridenour stayed away from criticizing or evaluating the Clinton administration successors in his book because he said he began writing it before a track record had been established. But he expressed concern in an interview in Washington this week— where he was testifying in a court case alleging age and sex discrimination by the service during his tenure.

He said the new generation of leaders at the Interior and Agriculture departments are "blurring the lines" among the federal agencies, dropping their traditional roles in place of other agencies' duties.

The Forest Service, an agency of the Agriculture Department, is looking for a mission since moving away from the traditional role of managing timber sales.

Ridenour predicted logging, as well as mining and grazing, will be sharply curbed in the future on public lands.

In the interview, Ridenour said he believes the reorganization within the agencies is causing a morale problem among employees. "Hopefully, it will all settle down and the employees will feel confident about their future there and feel like they have a home there," he said.

The changes include a switch from "sustaining yields" to "sustaining ecosystems," which has angered Western industries and the communities that depend on them for their livelihoods.

"The industries are extremely upset," he said. "They're tipping the balance toward preservation, which is not the traditional way. I predicted this in the book."

Another case where the federal government has angered Westerners is the wolf reintroduction program, Ridenour said. But ranchers will have to accept the inevitable on this one, he said.

"Wolves are going to come back to Yellowstone one way or another, it's a given," he said. "Whether it's naturally or by environmental groups going up to Canada, trapping and releasing them in Yellowstone."

But Ridenour said it's in the ranchers' best interests to accept the "experimental populations" of wolves the Interior Department has chosen for Yellowstone and Idaho because the ranchers will also have some protections.

If the populations return naturally, the wolves would be protected under the Endangered Species Act and shooting one could lead to fines or jail time. Under the experimental program, ranchers may kill wolves on their property if they see them attacking cattle.

Other topics include money, politics, historical and cultural monuments, and concessionaires.

The book costs $14.99 and was published by ICS Books, Inc.

Twin Falls teen charged with escape, trespassing

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – A 17-year-old Twin Falls boy was charged with two felony counts of escape at 8:30 p.m. Thursday after being at large since early Monday, when he ran from three Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department deputies, said Deputy Scott Bawser.

The youth also was charged Thursday by Twin Falls Police with trespassing at a Twin Falls residence and minor consumption of alcohol, said Officer Dan McAtee. The boy was picked up on an order of detention at the residence in which he was trespassing.

Early Sunday morning, the boy escaped from the Port of Hope, where juvenile probation officers had placed him in connection with criminal charges previously filed against him. Then early Monday his mother and stepfather reported he broke into their Twin Falls County house.

After the boy fled from the house, deputies were able to find out where he went from another juvenile, and they picked him up early Monday for violating probation. At the sheriff's office, the boy suddenly ran from the deputies.

Gas found in water under service station

MOSCOW (AP) — Heavy gasoline pollution has been discovered near a Moscow Conoco station after petroleum fumes were detected in the nearby sewer.

The station was suspect because there had been a gasoline leak at the site two years ago and officials thought some of the contaminated soil may have been washed into the sewer system.

It now appears the gasoline since found in the sewer is from a leak in the station's underground holding tanks.

"The facility is now owned by Budget Oil in Spokane and we think the latest problem relates to a release that happened since Conoco sold the station," said Gregg Teasdale, regional administrator of the state Division Environmental Quality.

fault, as were Buhl and Twin Falls highway districts. The canal company appealed that decision, and the Idaho Supreme Court reversed the trial court judgment and sent the case back to district court for a new trial.

A second jury in 1993, however, decided the canal company was solely at fault. The canal company claims the jury was improperly instructed and the trial court erred in both the admission and exclusion of evidence; it is asking the Supreme Court to reverse the judgment on the jury's verdict and reverse the trial court's order denying its motion for a new trial.

In an appeal scheduled to be heard at 10 a.m. Monday, three bean growers are appealing the dismissal of a case they brought against the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

Wayne Crown, Clark Bean and Steve Bean contend they presented enough evidence to show the department improperly inspected Hawkins Co. Ltd. warehouse and failed to inform them of insufficient inventories in April 1988. The warehouse ceased operation in November 1988 after the trio and other farmers delivered that year's crops there, and the warehouse was seized by the department.

In its summary judgment, the district court held that the department was not liable for failing to publicize the inspection results or for failing to revoke the warehouse's license because both were discretionary decisions.

Other cases the Idaho Supreme Court will consider next week include:

• Daniel Carter Killinger, who was convicted in 1993 on three counts of delivery of a controlled substance and three counts of delivery of a controlled substance in the presence of a minor, is appealing his sentencing. Killinger contends he was not notified that the prosecutor intended to seek a fixed sentencing under Idaho law, and he also argues his sentencing is excessive. Arguments will be heard at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

• Diane Hunt, former vice president and general manager of Property Management West Inc., contends she should not have to pay attorney fees after the company won a case against her. Oral argument will be heard at 8:50 a.m. Monday.

• Jose Vega, who was injured by farm equipment owned by Brad Neibaur, contends he should be awarded damages of $46,000 and not $30,000 as the jury's first verdict declared. Arguments will be heard at 11:10 a.m. Monday.

• Bell Rapids Mutual Irrigation Co. contends it should be able to pursue a claim against Jill Hausner, who did not pay her 1992 annual assessment for operating and maintaining shareholders' irrigation systems. Hausner had retired land into the federal Conservation Reserve Program. Arguments will be heard at 8:50 a.m. Wednesday.

• Volco Inc. and Development Enterprises contend the District Court, when hearing its claim against Ray Lickley and the Jerome Highway District, ignored plat markings that indicated lands it dedicated to public rights of way were only easements. Volco contends Jerome County commissioners waived the requirements for through streets in the development, and the Lickleys should also name Jerome County in their counterclaim. Arguments will be heard at 11:10 a.m. Nov. 16.

Arletta Coates Berry

BOISE – Arletta "Bernie" "Sis" Coates-Berry, 72, of Boise, died Tuesday, Nov. 8, 1994, in a Boise hospital of natural causes.

Bernie was born Feb. 19, 1922, in Fish Creek, Idaho. She graduated from Carey High School in 1940. Bernie joined the Navy during World War II and attended business school in Boise. She married Bill Perry on Aug. 25, 1946. Bernie retired from the VA Administration in 1973. She loved her career at the VA Hospital as an admitting clerk. She also loved flying with her husband up to the primitive area with Fay and Francis Brown, Bob and Claire Justad and Floyd and May Eason.

Bernie worked hard her whole life taking care of her parents, her job, and raising two girls home alone on an acreage. She used to irrigate the pasture before going to work in the morning. She loved to garden and would do home canning. She never took a lesson, but played the piano beautifully. She enjoyed fishing and hunting with her husband and together they learned quite a bit about farming.

Survivors include two daughters, Barbara Ann Roark and JoAnn Locke one grandchild, Randy Earl Roark; one son-in-law, David Locke; one brother, Devere Coates; one sister-in-law, Maxine Coates; one stepson, Jim Berry; one stepdaughter, Wanda Palmer; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. She was preceded in death by her husband, Bill; and her parents, Nathan and Vera Coates.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, 1994, at Summers Funeral Homes, Boise Chapel. Burial will follow at the Dry Creek Cemetery in Boise.

Memorials may be made to the National Kidney Foundation of Colorado Inc., 1805 S. Bellaire No. 301, Denver CO 80222-4317.

Mini-Cassia

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY – Minidoka and Cassia county commissioners met over lunch Wednesday, intending to hash out the details of a plan to lease part of Cassia Memorial Hospital to the South Central District Health Department.

But the meeting quickly turned into a debate over the letting most of Minidoka County's public health services move south of the Snake River, jeopardizing an already shaky plan to merge most of those services at Cassia Memorial Hospital next year.

The health district applied last week for a grant to convert part of the hospital into an office for most of the Mini-Cassia area's public health services, leaving only part-time public health services in Minidoka County.

Facing a Nov. 4 deadline for the application, the counties had agreed last month to seek the grant.

But now Minidoka commissioners want Cassia County to postpone the plan for one year, saying they prefer to build a centrally-located office in Heyburn, rather than sending Minidoka residents to the Burley hospital for public health service.

The commissioners said they are not obligated to accept the grant. They can always apply for a grant to build an office in future years, they said.

Health district officials may pull the grant if the counties can't agree.

"If we have one county adamantly opposed, we probably wouldn't do something contrary to what they want," said Charles Parker, vice-chairman of the health district board of directors.

Cassia Commissioner John Adams said he remains firm in his earlier decision to remodel part of Cassia Memorial Hospital for public health services. Those services would include family planning, immunizations and the Women, Infants and Children program.

If the services are merged in Burley, the Minidoka County satellite office would offer part-time immunizations only. Family planning and immunizations now are available full-time at the Minidoka County Courthouse in Rupert.

'We need to do something. I don't think we can go another year and feel good about the services we're providing now.'

— Charles Parker, vice-chairman, health district board of directors

The alternative – building a centrally-located office – would cost the counties $90,000 each, Adams said. That's a price Cassia County taxpayers aren't willing to pay, he said.

In mid-October, Cassia commissioners had agreed to apply for a grant to build such an office. They changed their minds, Adams said, after more than 900 people petitioned the commissioners to turn Cassia Memorial Hospital into a long-term health care facility when a new hospital opens next year, Adams said.

A health district office would be compatible with a long-term care facility at the hospital, Adams said. But Cassia commissioners still haven't decided whether to keep or sell the rest of the hospital, he added.

It's ultimately the district's decision whether to remodel the hospital or build an office, he said.

"I have no problem waiting for a year," Adams said.

Under state law, however, Cassia County could lease the hospital to the district for a maximum of five years.

An office owned by the counties would give the health district a long-term lease, Minidoka Commissioner Norman Seibold said. The district's future at the hospital would be uncertain if Cassia County kept the hospital and new commissioners decide not to renew the lease, he said.

Meanwhile, since the district began studying the merger three years ago, rising property values have increased the costs of building a new office, Parker said. It may cost more to remodel the hospital as well, he said.

"We need to do something," Parker said. "I don't think we can go another year and feel good about the services we're providing now."

EPA agrees to extend comment period for water protection plan

MOSCOW (AP) – Under pressure from House Speaker Tom Foley and against the wishes of Gov. Cecil Andrus, the Environmental Protection Agency extended the comment period on proposed drinking water protection for the Palouse area.

Thursday's announcement means the public will have until Feb. 17 to provide the EPA with new technical information about the proposal.

The sole-source proposal covers 14,000 square miles of eastern Washington and northern Idaho. Federal protection means the EPA can review any federally funded project that might pollute the drinking water.

This is the second delay this fall. It came just three days after Andrus asked EPA not to stall its decision on the Eastern Columbia Plateau aquifer system or Waste Management could construct a dump in Adams County, Wash., before the groundwater is protected.

Just two weeks ago, Foley wrote EPA Administrator Carol Browner to ask the agency extend its public comment on sole-source aquifer designation.

"The reason the EPA is extending the comment period is to dispel any perception that EPA has withheld information needed by the public to make informed comments on the proposal," said Ken Feigner, regional chief of the department's water program.

The Big Bend Economic Development Council, hired by Whitman County, Wash. and other county governments to fight sole-source protection, had asked for at least a year to review the project.

The Palouse-Clearwater Environmental Institute, which filed the petition for sole-source aquifer designation, said the delay may help people understand the benefits of aquifer protection.

But institute director Tom Lamar said he hopes the extra time will be used to study the program rather than "squander the time complaining about the science."

"I think it's time for county governments to learn how they can become a player in preventing groundwater contamination rather than figuring how they can stop federal protection of drinking water," Lamar said.

Waste Management said it is surprised by Andrus' position on the landfill, to be located 50 miles west of Pullman.

"There's no way, hydrogeologically, the landfill in Adams County could contaminate groundwater in Idaho," said Scott Cave of Northwest Strategies, Waste Management's public relations firm.

And the landfill will be so well constructed that it will not pollute groundwater anywhere, he said.

Drug-free zones surround Blackfoot schools

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Blackfoot Boy Scouts have mapped out a zone 1,000 feet from every school in town to exact stiffer penalties for drug dealers in those areas.

Drug-free zone signs surround Blackfoot schools thanks to Scouts from Troop 228.

It not only was an Eagle Scout project for Steven Whitehead, 14, but a community supported goal of going beyond the "Just say no to drugs" slogan, to say, "This is no place for drugs."

Under a new Idaho law, anyone convicted of trafficking in controlled substances within a 1,000-foot radius of a public or private school faces a minimum of five years in prison.

While Blackfoot School District appears to be the first in eastern Idaho to erect the signs, up to half around the state have them, state Education Department consultant Trish Getty said.

Sixth-grade complex teacher Judy Nacheff said she learned about the drug-free zone law from a Coeur d'Alene teacher at a workshop.

"He told me they had one person caught in the no-drug zone and he felt it had made a difference in cutting down on drug crimes near schools."

Nacheff said state law provides double penalties for anyone convicted of distributing controlled substances to people under the age of 18 or kids at least three years their junior.

Another provision is a sentence of up to five years and a $5,000 fine for anyone convicted of manufacturing or delivering drugs where children are present. Any imprisonment would be added onto to a term imposed for other offenses.

"It's a good message to get out to youths," Nacheff said. "We want them to feel safe at school."

Blackfoot Police Chief James Jackson noted a drug lab was discovered last year near Stalker Elementary School, and officers measured to see if it fell with in the 1,000-foot restriction. It didn't, but if it had, he said the new law would have been used in the prosecution.

Jury selected in Heidi Fleiss pandering case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury of seven men and five women and their alternates were selected Thursday for the high-profile pandering trial of Heidi Fleiss, including a man who said he believes prostitution should be legalized.

Attorneys and the judge finished assembling the multiethnic panel in the fourth day of questioning. Opening statements are set to begin Monday.

Fleiss, 28, is accused of procuring four women for sexual services. She was arrested last year in a sting operation and charged with five counts of pandering and one count of possessing cocaine. She faces a maximum penalty of 11 years in prison if convicted on all charges.

Defense attorney Donald Marks said he will argue his client was entrapped.

Fleiss has claimed to have celebrities and business moguls among her clients, but no names are expected to surface in court.

The panel of jurors ranges from a Hispanic woman in her early 20s to a 70-year-old white man.

Among those kept from the pool of potential jurors was man who said prostitution should be legalized. He was among the three alternates picked for the trial, expected to last about three weeks.

Transition team meets with Andrus

BOISE (AP) — Members of the 13-person transition team named by Gov.-Elect Phil Batt have held their first meeting with top aides to outgoing Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Batt had little to report after the Thursday afternoon session, other than to say it was a business-like meeting. "It was just a general discussion of where we're going," Batt said.

Clancy Staubridge, Andrus' chief of staff, and Budget Director Charles Moss were among those attending the meeting.

Batt said the next meeting will be Tuesday afternoon.

Crews will sample highway pavement

The Times-News

BURLEY – Idaho Transportation Department workers will be taking core samples of pavement next week from the surfaces of U.S. Highway 30 and state Highway 50.

Sampling will occur on U.S. 30 from the Y-Dell intersection at the east end of Burley to just north of Interstate 84. Idaho 50 sampling will take place near Murtaugh.

The pavement samples will be used to help design a recycling project for state roads.

Crews will be working in the travel lanes, and signs will alert motorists to the work.

Boise hit with worker shortages

BOISE (AP) — Some Treasure Valley manufacturers are trying to expand but are unable to find enough workers because the area's labor pool has not kept up with booming business conditions.

"In a sense, business is almost too good," Idaho Power Co. economist John Church said this week. "Demand for product is there, but they can't get the labor to make the product. It's kind of a cruel dilemma."

"There's just too many jobs and not enough people," he said.

The Long Beach, Calif.-based manufacturer of mobile homes and recreational vehicles blamed a third-quarter earnings shortfall partly on a labor shortage at its new Caldwell factory.

The company expected the plant to reach full capacity by the fourth quarter but could only find enough workers to operate at 40 percent of capacity.

Kit employs 550 people in its two Caldwell factories. It needs 50 more people right now, and in the spring it will try to expand the work force again, Wannamaker said. The company's pay range of $6.50 to $12 per hour reflects an average scale for manufacturing jobs. Kit also offers employees a benefits package.

The retail and service industries have felt a labor crunch for some time. But the manufacturing sector that normally offers a higher starting wage and the opportunity for advancement also is feeling the pinch.

The result for employers across the board is increased wages.

"With the high demand for labor, companies will have to pay the price," Church said.

Companies say they also have spent more money on recruitment, training and advertising locally and out of state.

"The labor issue is a problem we've been dealing with since June of 1993. Although it gets better at certain times of the year, it never truly gets better," Wannamaker said.

Fleetwood Homes of Idaho also has faced labor shortages since opening a second Nampa site in August. The factory is at 50 percent capacity with 100 employees.

"The labor market is the absolute pits. It's the worst I've ever seen it, and I've been here 30 years," manager Jim Chrisman said. "This is the first time in 20 years we've had to advertise jobs. We'll wait and see what happens in spring."

The rapid pace of job growth in Idaho is the culprit, Church said.

Idaho's employment growth rate has been among the nation's highest since 1988. Through the middle of this year, total nonagricultural employment grew 6.7 percent from last year, reaching 450,900.

Hollywood eyes skies over Panhandle

A nationally syndicated television show that investigates unexplained phenomena is interested in a Post Falls man's videotape that shows mysterious lights hovering over the city.

> 'They saw something that had multiple lights ...'
> — Cliff Hayes, Post Falls police chief

Several residents have reported seeing the light, including a few members of the Post Falls Police Department. Similar lights also have been seen in parts of the Spokane Valley.

James Farley said he is sending a copy of the tape to Paramount Pictures' "Sightings" which may air it during an upcoming episode.

He was recently interviewed by Phil Davis, a "Sightings" researcher.

He said the video was shot by a neighbor, Guy Johnson, who happened to be watching the lights from his home on the same night Farley first saw them last April. Both men live near the Spokane River.

Farley said he's seen the lights many times since, including Thursday night. The sightings generally take place between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m.

The white, red, blue, gold and green lights flash on and off and, when observed through binoculars, look as if they're attached to something. "The closest as I can describe it is a squished tear shape," Farley said.

Peggy Malar, who lives with Farley, said "We have sightings all the time, it's just that more people are starting to report them now."

"The problem was, a lot of people didn't want to report it before because everybody would think they were nuts," she said. "It's definitely something, we just don't know what it is."

Police Chief Cliff Hayes said the department has taken several reports of the lights and four police employees have seen them from an office window.

"They saw something that had multiple lights over five nights south of the PD far away," he said. "They weren't at the distance or level of most stars."

Harris hasn't seen the lights himself and is perplexed by them, though he isn't taking the matter too seriously.

"These people have been on graveyard a long time. I'm going to take them off," he said.

The U.S. Weather Service hasn't observed anything unusual in the area on its radar and Fairchild Air Force Base reportedly hasn't had any unusual flights or aircraft nearby.

Gerald Rolwes, a volunteer for the Spokane branch of the Mutual UFO Network, said he is getting calls from both Post Falls and throughout the Spokane Valley. All the callers have described the same color of lights.

He said his group investigates UFO sightings and works to find explanations for the them.

Accident claims woman, infant son

NAMPA — A Caldwell woman and her 3-month-old son were killed in a two-car collision in Canyon County.

The Idaho State Police reported that Yolanda Rangel Devilla, 27, and her son, Rolondo, died when the station wagon they were passengers in was hit by a another car at an intersection.

Police indicated the accident occurred about midday Wednesday as the station wagon proceeded through the intersection after stopping for the stop sign. There was no stop sign on the road traveled by the other car.

Man charged with killing roommate

EMMETT — An Emmett man has been charged with first-degree murder for the shooting death of his roommate.

Richard Bee, whose age was unavailable, was in the Gem County Jail after being arraigned Wednesday for Tuesday night's slaying of Michael Crabtree.

Emmett Police Chief Gary Scheihing said Crabtree died at the scene of the shooting about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. Ada County sheriff's deputies arrested Bee shortly after 2 a.m. Wednesday near Firebird Raceway.

Danetta Retzloff was wounded in the shooting. Scheihing said she was taken to Walter Knox Memorial Hospital in Emmett, but a nursing supervisor there would not discuss her condition.

Scheihing said police did not know why the shooting occurred, but that Bee, Crabtree and Retzloff all lived in the house together.

Boise teachers, board locked in talks

BOISE — Teachers in some Boise schools have stopped taking papers home to grade and will not meet with children or parents after the end of their work day.

The work slowdown is another step in the increasingly tense dispute between the Boise School District and 1,400 teachers, librarians, counselors and other members of the Boise Education Association.

Teachers and the district are at odds over a new contract. They have been working under last year's contract since school began. A negotiation session Wednesday evening resulted in some progress, both sides said, and talks were resuming Thursday.

Teachers will meet next Wednesday to decide what to do next, including the possibility of a strike. If they do walk out, it would affect the education of 26,500 children in Idaho's largest school district.

Rathdrum residents battle plant plan

RATHDRUM — Some Rathdrum Prairie neighbors continue to bash a natural-gas power turbine proposed near town, warning it will pollute the air around their schools.

But state Division of Environmental Quality officials and power developers say the proposed $100 million turbine is one of the cleanest around and beats building more hydroelectric dams.

"The word is out that, thanks to DEQ, Kootenai County is the polluter's paradise," resident Jane Morgan told a Wednesday gathering of about 75.

The plant will produce 99 tons of nitrogen oxide, seven tons of particulates, 18 tons of sulfur dioxide and 88 tons of ammonia each year. Some become acid in the air.

Neighbors worry the wind will blow the chemicals toward the city and schools. They want local air tests before permit approval.

Center releases rare crows on Hawaii

BOISE — Seven new Hawaiian crows have been released in their homeland in an effort to revive the critically endangered bird, says the Peregrine Fund in Boise.

The 'Alala population on the island of Hawaii is about 20 birds, including the new hatch.

The seven 'Alala were transported from Idaho to an aviary in Hawaii and allowed to venture out beginning Oct. 25. Peregrine Fund biologists will continue to care for them until they are totally independent in a few months.

"Although we have a long way to go, we are pleased to have the second year of releases under way," said Peregrine Fund president Bill Burnham.

Problems brew at new women's prison

POCATELLO — While the new state women's prison at Pocatello is polishing its operations, some problems are occurring between the inmates and administration, state officials concede.

A male guard accused of sexual harassment by three inmates has resigned and the Idaho Bureau of Investigations is reviewing the allegations.

"It's an independent investigation," said Angela Blom, prison spokeswoman. She would not elaborate on the charges.

She also confirmed some "misbehavior and lesbianism" has prompted changes in recreational privileges for inmates.

Until all educational and treatment programs were up and running, Blom said medium- and minimum-security prisoners were allowed to mix during recreational yard hours and inappropriate behavior resulted.

Now, minimum- and maximum-security inmates have separate recreational hours, Blom said.

"All our privileges here are behavior-driven," she said. The prison now holds 118 inmates.

Blom, however, denied that inmates are being harassed or mistreated.

Inmate Pam Beebe said prisoners are having their privileges denied, are punished arbitrarily and segregated for minor or non-existent infractions.

Beebe, prison law library clerk, said lights are kept on 24 hours a day, ice for soft drinks is no longer provided, visiting procedures are more strict and other strictures have been applied.

"It's an administrative disaster. They're cutting back on a lot of privileges due to the gay activity," Beebe said.

Blom said visiting procedures are being tightened to discourage contraband. As for lights being left on 24 hours, Blom said nine-watt security lights are kept on in strategic areas throughout the prison, but they are not intrusive.

As for ice privileges being denied, Blom said that was due to abuse by the inmates.

"Some of them were putting ice on the electric thermostats in order to bring down the temperature. Inmates received verbal and then written warnings before that privilege was denied," Blom said.

No tobacco will be allowed in Christmas packages because there is no smoking in the prison, she said.

Insurance agent says county owes him for services

On Tuesday, Hughes filed a $350,000 tort claim against the county. It states Hughes' damages were more than $700,000.

"But this claim is made for only $350,000 because Mr. Hughes desires a swift resolution of this problem," it states.

Commissioners have 90 days to respond. Hughes said he will sue the county if his claim is denied.

"I would be willing to listen to any offer that the commissioners make," he said. "But it's become obvious that they don't want to do the right thing."

Commission Chairman Tom Katsilometes described the claim as frivolous.

"We won't be paying out on this, one," he said.

In July, Hughes approached the county about new coverage. Both sides agree the county ultimately saved about $300,000 in health care costs because of the new policy.

Ex-Moody Blues violinst headlines symphony concert

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Flash back 20 years: Tompkins, a violinist, landed a job performing with and composing music for the Moody Blues.

"It was wonderful," said Tompkins of his years with the British super group best known for its "Days of Future Passed" album. "We were just three country guys from Idaho."

Tompkins, along with his brother Tim and his friend Jim Cockey, who's now a composer in Nashville, were the string players for the Moody Blues (to the tune of a gold album).

From there, Tompkins spent three years in Mexico, with the Veracruz Symphony, the State of Mexico Orchestra and the Mexico City Philharmonic. After that, he performed in 203 productions of Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein's "Show Boat" during a nine-month tour of Europe.

In between, he earned a degree in viola performance from the University of Southern California.

Since 1985, Tompkins has been principal violist for the Boise Philharmonic. He's also an adjunct professor at Boise State University.

Tompkins' wife, Jill Rowley, is associate concertmaster of the Boise Philharmonic. The two also operate a private music studio. Their children, a 6-year-old boy and a 4-year-old girl, are already well grounded in the arts.

"My children have been singing since before they could talk," said Tompkins, 42. "Music is just part of their lives."

That's the way it should be, Tompkins contends. Parents should sing lullabies to their babies and should sing songs with their children in the car.

But, he says, it's possible to go too far.

"As string teachers, we see parents trying to get children into structured music programs too early," Tompkins said. "(Age) 8 or 9 is early enough for string lessons."

A good alternative for younger children is early access to a piano, Tompkins explained.

"It's user friendly," he said. "You push a key, and it's in tune and it sounds nice."

Though Tompkins now makes his living in the classical music field, he's still as versatile as ever in his spare time.

He plays with a jazz group called "Onomatopoeia" ("it's spelled the way it sounds; we are what we sound like"). He's currently recording a jazz CD with the group and expects it to be released by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, there's the Magic Valley Symphony performance.

"The wordless chorus is amazingly powerful," Tompkins said. "They hum, and they create this fabulous texture."

In fact, the entire composition has a texture all its own.

"It's too bad we can't play it twice because the first time you think, 'Oh, what was that?' and the second time you think, 'Oooo, I like that,'" Tompkins said.

Then he added, with a smile, "But I do think the audience will like it the first time, too."

Tickets available

Tom Tompkins will perform with the Magic Valley Symphony at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium.

He will perform Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Flos Campi." The symphony will perform "Death & Transfiguration" by Richard Strauss, among other selections.

A reception for Tompkins, symphony conductor Theodore Hadley and symphony members will be held immediately after the performance in the CSI Taylor Building lobby.

Tickets to the concert, priced at $6 for adults and $3 for senior citizens and students, may be purchased at the CSI Bookstore, Keith Jorgensen's, The Music Center, Jan's Music Outlet or Larson Arts in Twin Falls; Welch's Music in Twin Falls and Burley, West One Bank in Jerome, Positive Way in Wendell or at the door.

Radio City

Burley's KZDX aims for a bigger share of the Twin Falls FM market

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

KZDX, 99.9 FM, the adult contemporary music-format product of Burley's Mini-Cassia Broadcasting Co., has opened a new office here and hopes new advertising dollars will follow.

"After Boise, Twin Falls is the best growth market for radio in Idaho," said Rick Nash, KZDX's Twin Falls sales representative. "We're already a significant part of it, and we'd like to do more."

— Rick Nash, Twin Falls sales representative for KZDX

"Twin Falls has really become the economic heart of the Magic Valley," said Dick Huizinga, general manager of KZDX and its sister AM station, KBAR. "It's like Salt Lake City — you say you're from Salt Lake even if you really live in Sandy."

KZDX already has a foothold on the Twin Falls radio market, according to the Willhight Research Inc. survey for July and August — at least among Generation Xers and younger baby boomers.

Among listeners in their 20s and early 30s, the station was No. 1 among men — and No. 1 among all listeners of that age group on Saturdays and Sundays.

"KEZJ does a fine job and I'm sure they'll continue to be very successful," Nash said. "But there's room for us too."

That's a conclusion shared by Jerome-based Tri-Market Broadcasting, which in September began a push by its Rupert-based country station, KKMV, into the Twin Falls market.

"Competition is good," Huizinga said. "It makes you sharper and makes you produce a better product. The listeners and the advertisers are better served."

There are nine FM stations with a piece of the Twin Falls market, two of which have programming roughly comparable with KZDX's mix of vintage and contemporary rock: KLIX is owned by B&B Broadcasting and Jerome's KMVX by Tri-Market Broadcasting.

Neither Terry Tario, general manager of KEZJ and KLIX, nor Kent Lee, who runs KMVX, could be reached for comment Thursday.

"I don't think there are too many radio stations in this market," Nash said. "With the rate Twin Falls is growing, I wouldn't be surprised if somebody else got in during the next few years."

"Our goal is to be a regional radio station," Huizinga said. "Our signal reaches from Rexburg to Wells (Nev.) and from Tremonton (Utah) to Mountain Home, so we think we're in an excellent position to do that."

Mini-dish satellite leaps to next TV generation

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It costs less than $1,000 and can be installed blindfolded by a couch potato who flunked shop in high school.

RCA says it's the next generation of video technology — cheap, high-quality and readily available in any home in America. The cable TV industry and RCA's competitors counter that it's a flashy transitional gadget that will saddle its owners with yesterday's technology and tomorrow's higher cable bills.

But whatever it is, the Digital Satellite System — or mini-dish, as it's commonly called — is hotter than a jerry-rigged string of Christmas tree lights.

"We can't keep them in our stores," said Elvis Cain, chairman of Cain's Home Furnishing and Appliances. "We already have a waiting list."

"There was a problem getting product, but Sears caught up," said Phil Christensen, who manages the electronics department at Sears' outlet in the Magic Valley Mall, which has stocked the mini-dishes since the first of October. "We've sold a lot of them, but we still have an inventory of 18-20."

Ken Walker, whose Satellite Technology has been selling full-sized dishes for 18 years and mini-dishes for the past three weeks, says the RCA product will open up a whole new segment of the TV market.

"You don't get as many channels as you would with a full-sized dish," he said. "But you get a lot more than you get on cable."

"It's a quantum leap," Washington, D.C., communications analyst Peter Huber told Knight-Ridder Newspapers. "Cable TV is purchased by only about 60 percent of the country's homes. This new system is really universal."

The 18-inch mini-dishes, developed by RCA and France's Thomson Electronics, are about one-seventh the size of the standard backyard satellite dish. They're sold as packages with everything you need to tune in at home — including a receiver-descrambler box and a wireless remote control.

The price tag is $699 — $899 if you have two TV sets.

To install the system, you point the dish south — toward two brand-new satellites stationary orbit 22,300 miles over the Caribbean which rain down digitized, powerful TV signals.

For about $30 a month — more for premium channels and various sports and movie packages — every resident of the continental United States will be in range of 150 channels of crystal-clear TV programs. That's about 10 times the number available via antennas, three times what's available on most cable systems.

"I think most people are attracted by the price," Christensen said. "But what's remarkable about this system is the picture and the CD-quality sound."

According to Knight-Ridder, mini-dish owners have a choice of:

• Forty pay-per-view movies at $2.99 each starting at 30-minute intervals 24 hours a day, plus $3-to-$95-per-month viewing packages that include seven Encore channels, five Home Box Office channels, three Cinemax channels, two Movie Channels.

• Fourteen channels of sports including

Because the maker underestimated demand, stores have few mini-dishes in stock and are setting up waiting lists. Supplies will improve as Thomson/RCA catches up with demand, but it could be days or weeks.

Boise hit with worker shortages

BOISE (AP) — Some Treasure Valley manufacturers are trying to expand but are unable to find enough workers because the area's labor pool has not kept up with booming business conditions.

"In a sense, business is almost too good," Idaho Power Co. economist John Church said this week. "Demand for product is there, but they can't get the labor to make the product. It's kind of a cruel dilemma."

"There's just too many jobs and not enough people," he said.

The Long Beach, Calif.-based manufacturer of mobile homes and recreational vehicles blamed a third-quarter earnings shortfall partly on a labor shortage at its new Caldwell factory.

The company expected the plant to reach full capacity by the fourth quarter but could only find enough workers to operate at 40 percent of capacity.

Kit employs 550 people in its two Caldwell factories. It needs 50 more people right now, and in the spring it will try to expand the work force again, Wannamaker said. The company's pay range of $6.50 to $12 per hour reflects an average scale for manufacturing jobs. Kit also offers employees a benefits package.

The retail and service industries have felt a labor crunch for some time. But the manufacturing sector that normally offers a higher starting wage and the opportunity for advancement also is feeling the pinch.

The result for employers across the board is increased wages.

"With the high demand for labor, companies will have to pay the price," Church said.

Companies say they also have spent more money on recruitment, training and advertising locally and out of state.

"The labor issue is a problem we've been dealing with since June of 1993. Although it gets better at certain times of the year, it never truly gets better," Wannamaker said.

Fleetwood Homes of Idaho also has faced labor shortages since opening a second Nampa site in August. The factory is at 50 percent capacity with 100 employees.

"The labor market is the absolute pits. It's the worst I've ever seen it, and I've been here 30 years," manager Jim Chrisman said. "This is the first time in 20 years we've had to advertise jobs. We'll wait and see what happens in spring."

The rapid pace of job growth in Idaho is the culprit, Church said.

Idaho's employment growth rate has been among the nation's highest since 1988. Through the middle of this year, total nonagricultural employment grew 6.7 percent from last year, reaching 450,900.

Hollywood eyes skies over Panhandle

A nationally syndicated television show that investigates unexplained phenomena is interested in a Post Falls man's videotape that shows mysterious lights hovering over the city.

> 'They saw something that had multiple lights ...'
> — Cliff Hayes, Post Falls police chief

Several residents have reported seeing the light, including a few members of the Post Falls Police Department. Similar lights also have been seen in parts of the Spokane Valley.

James Farley said he is sending a copy of the tape to Paramount Pictures' "Sightings," which may air it during an upcoming episode.

He was recently interviewed by Phil Davis, a "Sightings" researcher.

He said the video was shot by a neighbor, Guy Johnson, who happened to be watching the lights from his home on the same night Farley first saw them last April. Both men live near the Spokane River.

Farley said he's seen the lights many times since, including Thursday night. The sightings generally take place between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m.

The white, red, blue, gold and green lights flash on and off and, when observed through binoculars, look as if they're attached to something. "The closest as I can describe it is a squished tear shape," Farley said.

Peggy Malar, who lives with Farley, said "We have sightings all the time, it's just that more people are starting to report them now."

"The problem was, a lot of people didn't want to report it before because everybody would think they were nuts," she said. "It's definitely something, we just don't know what it is."

Police Chief Cliff Hayes said the department has taken several reports of the lights and four police employees have seen them from an office window.

"They saw something that had multiple lights over five nights south of the PD far away," he said. "They weren't at the distance or level of most stars."

Harris hasn't seen the lights himself and is perplexed by them, though he isn't taking the matter too seriously.

"These people have been on graveyard a long time. I'm going to take them off," he said.

The U.S. Weather Service hasn't observed anything unusual in the area on its radar and Fairchild Air Force Base reportedly hasn't had any unusual flights or aircraft nearby.

Gerald Rolwes, a volunteer for the Spokane branch of the Mutual UFO Network, said he is getting calls from both Post Falls and throughout the Spokane Valley. All the callers have described the same color of lights.

He said his group investigates UFO sightings and works to find explanations for the them.

Accident claims woman, infant son

NAMPA — A Caldwell woman and her 3-month-old son were killed in a two-car collision in Canyon County.

The Idaho State Police reported that Yolanda Rangel Devilla, 27, and her son, Rolondo, died when the station wagon they were passengers in was hit by a another car at an intersection.

Police indicated the accident occurred about midday Wednesday as the station wagon proceeded through the intersection after stopping for the stop sign. There was no stop sign on the road traveled by the other car.

Man charged with killing roommate

EMMETT — An Emmett man has been charged with first-degree murder for the shooting death of his roommate.

Richard Bee, whose age was unavailable, was in the Gem County Jail after being arraigned Wednesday for Tuesday night's slaying of Michael Crabtree.

Emmett Police Chief Gary Scheihing said Crabtree died at the scene of the shooting about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. Ada County sheriff's deputies arrested Bee shortly after 2 a.m. Wednesday near Firebird Raceway.

Danetta Retzloff was wounded in the shooting. Scheihing said she was taken to Walter Knox Memorial Hospital in Emmett, but a nursing supervisor there would not discuss her condition.

Scheihing said police did not know why the shooting occurred, but that Bee, Crabtree and Retzloff all lived in the house together.

Boise teachers, board locked in talks

BOISE — Teachers in some Boise schools have stopped taking papers home to grade and will not meet with children or parents after the end of their work day.

The work slowdown is another step in the increasingly tense dispute between the Boise School District and 1,400 teachers, librarians, counselors and other members of the Boise Education Association.

Teachers and the district are at odds over a new contract. They have been working under last year's contract since school began. A negotiation session Wednesday evening resulted in some progress, both sides said, and talks were resuming Thursday.

Teachers will meet next Wednesday to decide what to do next, including the possibility of a strike. If they do walk out, it would affect the education of 26,500 children in Idaho's largest school district.

Rathdrum residents battle plant plan

RATHDRUM — Some Rathdrum Prairie neighbors continue to bash a natural-gas power turbine proposed near town, warning it will pollute the air around their schools.

But state Division of Environmental Quality officials and power developers say the proposed $100 million turbine is one of the cleanest around and beats building more hydroelectric dams.

"The word is out that, thanks to DEQ, Kootenai County is the polluter's paradise," resident Jane Morgan told a Wednesday gathering of about 75.

The plant will produce 99 tons of nitrogen oxide, seven tons of particulates, 18 tons of sulfur dioxide and 88 tons of ammonia each year. Some become acid in the air.

Neighbors worry the wind will blow the chemicals toward the city and schools. They want local air tests before permit approval.

Center releases rare crows on Hawaii

BOISE — Seven new Hawaiian crows have been released in their homeland in an effort to revive the critically endangered bird, says the Peregrine Fund in Boise.

The 'Alala population on the island of Hawaii is about 20 birds, including the new hatch.

The seven 'Alala were transported from Idaho to an aviary in Hawaii and allowed to venture out beginning Oct. 25. Peregrine Fund biologists will continue to care for them until they are totally independent in a few months.

"Although we have a long way to go, we are pleased to have the second year of releases under way," said Peregrine Fund president Bill Burnham.

Problems brew at new women's prison

POCATELLO — While the new state women's prison at Pocatello is polishing its operations, some problems are occurring between the inmates and administration, state officials concede.

A male guard accused of sexual harassment by three inmates has resigned and the Idaho Bureau of Investigations is reviewing the allegations.

"It's an independent investigation," said Angela Blom, prison spokeswoman. She would not elaborate on the charges.

She also confirmed some "misbehavior and lesbianism" has prompted changes in recreational privileges for inmates.

Until all educational and treatment programs were up and running, Blom said, medium- and minimum-security prisoners were allowed to mix during recreational yard hours and inappropriate behavior resulted.

Now, minimum- and maximum-security inmates have separate recreational hours, Blom said.

"All our privileges here are behavior-driven," she said. The prison now holds 118 inmates.

Blom, however, denied that inmates are being harassed or mistreated.

Inmate Pam Beebe said prisoners are having their privileges denied, are punished arbitrarily and segregated for minor or non-existent infractions.

Beebe, prison law library clerk, said lights are kept on 24 hours a day, ice for soft drinks is no longer provided, visiting procedures are more strict and other strictures have been applied.

"It's an administrative disaster. They're cutting back on a lot of privileges due to the gay activity," Beebe said.

Blom said visiting procedures are being tightened to discourage contraband. As for lights being left on 24 hours, Blom said nine-volt security lights are kept on in strategic areas throughout the prison, but they are not intrusive.

As for ice privileges being denied, Blom said that was due to abuse by the inmates.

"Some of them were putting ice on the electric thermostats in order to bring down the temperature. Inmates received verbal and then written warnings before that privilege was denied," Blom said.

No tobacco will be allowed in Christmas packages because there is no smoking in the prison, she said.

Insurance agent says county owes him for services

On Tuesday, Hughes filed a $350,000 tort claim against the county. It states Hughes' damages were more than $700,000.

"But this claim is made for only $350,000 because Mr. Hughes desires a swift resolution of this problem," it states.

Commissioners have 90 days to respond. Hughes said he will sue the county if his claim is denied.

"I would be willing to listen to any offer that the commissioners make," he said. "But it's become obvious that they don't want to do the right thing."

Commission Chairman Tom Katsilometes described the claim as frivolous.

"We won't be paying out on this one," he said.

In July, Hughes approached the county about new coverage. Both sides agree the county ultimately saved about $300,000 in health care costs because of the new policy.

Strings of white satin

Ex-Moody Blues violinst headlines symphony concert

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Flash back 20 years: Tompkins, a violinist, landed a job performing with and composing music for the Moody Blues.

"It was wonderful," said Tompkins of his years with the British super group best-known for its "Days of Future Passed" album. "We were just three country guys from Idaho."

Tompkins, along with his brother Tim and his friend Jim Cockey, who's now a composer in McCall, were the string players for the Moody Blues (to the tune of a gold album).

From there, Tompkins spent three years in Mexico, with the Veracruz Symphony, the State of Mexico Orchestra and the Mexico City Philharmonic. After that, he performed in 203 productions of Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein's "Show Boat" during a nine-month tour of Europe.

In between, he earned a degree in viola performance from the University of Southern California.

Since 1985, Tompkins has been principal violist for the Boise Philharmonic. He's also an adjunct professor at Boise State University.

Tompkins' wife, Jill Rowley, is associate concertmaster of the Boise Philharmonic. The two also operate a private music studio. Their children, a 6-year-old boy and a 4-year-old girl, are already well grounded in the arts.

"My children have been singing since before they could talk," said Tompkins, 42. "Music is just part of their lives."

That's the way it should be, Tompkins contends. Parents should sing lullabies to their babies and should sing songs with their children in the car.

But, he says, it's possible to go too far.

"As string teachers, we see parents trying to get children into structured music programs too early," Tompkins said. "(Age) 8 or 9 is early enough for string lessons."

A good alternative for younger children is early access to a piano, Tompkins explained.

"It's user friendly," he said. "You push a key, and it's in tune and it sounds nice."

Though Tompkins now makes his living in the classical music field, he's still as versatile as ever in his spare time.

He plays with a jazz group called "Onomatopoeia" ("it's spelled the way it sounds; we are what we sound like"). He's currently recording a jazz CD with the group and expects it to be released by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, there's the Magic Valley Symphony performance.

"The wordless chorus is amazingly powerful," Tompkins said. "They hum, and they create this fabulous texture."

In fact, the entire composition has a texture all its own.

"It's too bad we can't play it twice because the first time you think, 'Oh, what was that?' and the second time you think, 'Oooo, I like that,'" Tompkins said.

Then he added, with a smile, "But I do think the audience will like it the first time, too."

Tickets available

Tom Tompkins will perform with the Magic Valley Symphony at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium.

He will perform Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Flos Campi." The symphony will perform "Death & Transfiguration" by Richard Strauss, among other selections.

A reception for Tompkins, symphony conductor Theodore Hadley and symphony members will be held immediately after the performance in the CSI Taylor Building lobby.

Tickets to the concert, priced at $6 for adults and $3 for senior citizens and students, may be purchased at the CSI Bookstore, Keith Jorgensen's, The Music Center, Jan's Music Outlet or Larson Arts in Twin Falls, Welch's Music in Twin Falls and Burley, West One Bank in Jerome, Positive Way in Wendell or at the door.

Radio City

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

KZDX, 99.9 FM, the adult contemporary music-format product of Burley's Mini-Cassia Broadcasting Co., has opened a new office here and hopes new advertising dollars will follow.

"After Boise, Twin Falls is the best growth market for radio in Idaho," said Rick Nash, KZDX's Twin Falls sales representative. "We're already a significant part of it, and we'd like to do more."

— Rick Nash, Twin Falls sales representative for KZDX

"Twin Falls has really become the economic heart of the Magic Valley," said Dick Huizinga, general manager of KZDX and its sister AM station, KBAR. "It's like Salt Lake City — you say you're from Salt Lake even if you really live in Sandy."

KZDX already has a foothold on the Twin Falls radio market, according to the Willhight Research Inc. survey for July and August — at least among Generation Xers and younger baby boomers.

Among listeners in their 20s and early 30s, the station was No. 1 among men — and No. 1 among all listeners of that age group on Saturdays and Sundays.

KZDX's overall audience numbers still lag behind country-music frontrunner KEZJ, owned by Twin Falls-based B&B Broadcasting.

"KEZJ does a fine job and I'm sure they'll continue to be very successful," Nash said. "But there's room for us too."

That's a conclusion shared by Jerome-based Tri-Market Broadcasting, which in September began a push by its Rupert-based country station, KKMV, into the Twin Falls market.

"Competition is good," Huizinga said. "It makes you sharper and makes you produce a better product. The listeners and the advertisers are better served."

There are nine FM stations with a piece of the Twin Falls market, two of which have programming roughly comparable with KZDX's mix of vintage and contemporary rock: KLIX is owned by B&B Broadcasting and Jerome's KMVX by Tri-Market Broadcasting.

Neither Terry Tario, general manager of KEZJ and KLIX, nor Kent Lee, who runs KMVX, could be reached for comment Thursday.

"I don't think there are too many radio stations in this market," Nash said. "With the rate Twin Falls is growing, I wouldn't be surprised if somebody else got in during the next few years."

"Our goal is to be a regional radio station," Huizinga said. "Our signal reaches from Rexburg to Wells (Nev.) and from Tremonton (Utah) to Mountain Home, so we think we're in an excellent position to do that."

Mini-dish satellite leaps to next TV generation

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It costs less than $1,000 and can be installed blindfolded by a couch potato who flunked shop in high school.

RCA says it's the next generation of video technology — cheap, high-quality and readily available in any home in America. The cable TV industry and RCA's competitors counter that it's a flashy transitional gadget that will saddle its owners with yesterday's technology and tomorrow's higher cable bills.

But whatever it is, the Digital Satellite System — or mini-dish, as it's commonly called — is hotter than a jerry-rigged string of Christmas tree lights.

"We can't keep them in our stores," said Elvis Cain, chairman of Cain's Home Furnishing and Appliances. "We already have a waiting list."

"There was a problem getting product, but Sears caught up," said Phil Christensen, who manages the electronics department at Sears' outlet in the Magic Valley Mall, which has stocked the mini-dishes since the first of October. "We've sold a lot of them, but we still have an inventory of 18-20."

Ken Walker, whose Satellite Technology has been selling full-sized dishes for 18 years and mini-dishes for the past three weeks, says the RCA product will open up a whole new segment of the TV market.

"You don't get as many channels as you would with a full-sized dish," he said. "But you get a lot more than you get on cable."

"It's a quantum leap," Washington, D.C., communications analyst Peter Huber told Knight-Ridder Newspapers. "Cable TV is purchased by only about 60 percent of the country's homes. This new system is really universal."

The 18-inch mini-dishes, developed by RCA and France's Thomson Electronics, are about one-seventh the size of the standard backyard satellite dish. They're sold as packages with everything you need to tune in at home — including a receiver-descrambler box and a wireless remote control.

The price tag is $699 — $899 if you have two TV sets.

To install the system, you point the dish south, toward two brand-new satellites in stationary orbit 22,300 miles over the Caribbean which rain down digitized, powerful TV signals.

For about $30 a month — more for premium channels and various sports and movie packages — every resident of the continental United States will be in range of 150 channels of crystal-clear TV programs. That's about 10 times the number available via antennas, three times what's available on most cable systems.

"I think most people are attracted by the price," Christensen said. "But what's remarkable about this system is the picture and the CD-quality sound."

According to Knight-Ridder, mini-dish owners have a choice of:

• Forty pay-per-view movies at $2.99 each starting at 30-minute intervals 24 hours a day, plus $3-to-$95-per-month viewing packages that include seven En-core channels, five Home Box Office channels, three Cinemax channels, two Movie Channels.

• Fourteen channels of sports includ-

Because the maker underestimated demand, stores have few mini-dishes in stock and are setting up waiting lists. Supplies will improve as Thomson/RCA catches up with demand, but it could be days or weeks.

Broadcast TV

What: 3- to 4-foot outdoor antenna, plus pole

Cost: $25 to $45

Programming: All local VHF and UHF broadcast channels.

Cable TV

What: ½-inch coaxial cable

Cost: Installation fee of $25 to $75; monthly programming bill of $9 to $60

Programming: 50 to 80 channels, depending on cable company's lineup.

Pluses: No big fees for extra hardware, other than for a converter box in some cases. Works well with some cable-ready VCRs and TVs, and gives you local, over-the-air stations as well as cable-only channels.

Minuses: Cable firms dictate program choices. Higher fees for premium channels such as HBO or Showtime. Picture quality varies from system to system, and may be affected by rain.

The big dish (C-band satellite)

Size: 7- to 10-foot dish

Cost: $2,000-$4,000, including installation. $25-$45 for an additional antenna to receive local broadcast channels (or about $9 monthly for basic cable).

Satellite-programming fees are $6-$70 monthly or $150-$600 per year.

Programming: 26 satellites carry more than 300 channels, from hit movies to adult fare, plus live-event coverage (from sports to live feeds from the space shuttle). Also "wild" feeds — for instance, live news coverage sent to networks from reporters around the world, plus advance network programming sent to local stations up to a week before they air locally.

Pluses: The most choices and best prices when compared to cable or mini-dish satellite systems (it's cheaper because dozens of companies are competing). While most signals are scrambled, there is still a fair amount of free programming, including wild feeds. Picture quality is better than cable but below digital.

Minuses: No channel surfing. Every time you switch channels, it takes the dish a minute or two to realign with a different satellite.

Viewers who want to watch two channels at the same time on different sets must buy a second "slave" receiver for $350 to $550. And even the two receivers would still be limited to receiving programs from one of the 26 satellites up there. Also, there's an extra monthly charge for that second signal.

The dish is large, and you still need need an outdoor antenna or basic cable to watch local channels. Some satellites send signals on a different band called KU, which requires additional hardware. To know what's on, you must subscribe to a special TV listings magazine (Satellite Orbit is monthly, call (800) 777-1194; Satellite TV Week is weekly, call (800) 345-8876).

Here's the dish on installation

Knight-Ridder News Service

"Beam me up, Scotty!" Those words never rang truer than with the new RCA Digital Satellite System, the fixed, 18-inch dish that links your home to two new satellites.

The DSS dish and receiver cost $699 for a basic system or $899 for one that hooks up to two TV sets. (If you want to watch different channels on those sets, you need a second receiver, at $649.) Installation runs $200 more.

What you get is the dish antenna that mounts outside your home and a receiver/descrambler that connects to your television, plus a special remote control, mounting parts, cables and instructions on installation and activating the system.

The dish may go in back yards, on roofs, decks or balconies, or mounted on a home's exterior walls. The only requirement: It must have an unobstructed view of the southwest sky (no trees, no telephone wires).

RCA designed the mini-dish to eliminate the drawbacks (read: zoning restrictions) of larger dishes, but many municipalities have not yet ruled on the 18-inch dishes. When the small dishes were introduced this year, many zoning boards decided to treat them like air-conditioning units, which don't require permits.

If you are an apartment dweller or condominium owner, you should get approval from the board of directors or check your lease for restrictions on outside television antennas.

Once you have a green light and buy the dish, you face another choice: Install it yourself, or have a professional do it.

I know my way around a VCR, so my first thought was to do it myself. But considering the requirements — finding a mounting spot with a clear view of the southwest sky, running the lines into my house and, of course, grounding the dish against lightning — I took RCA's advice and let an experienced installer take over. (Another factor: Improper installation voids the warranty.)

Thomson Consumer Electronics, RCA's parent company, gave me the names of dozens of local authorized installers; Thomson has a toll-free line to help buyers find them: (800) 679-4776.

I called Direct Satellite Services of Miami, which sent out technician Danny Suarez. He found that the back of my house was the best location for a good signal.

After assembling the dish and bolting it to the wall, Suarez drilled, ran coaxial cables inside and made sure the ground wire was attached properly. Next, Suarez connected the cables to the receiver and TV, plus a telephone line for simplified pay-per-view ordering. The whole process took less than an hour. (In some homes, installation can take far longer because of wiring problems, connection of existing audio/video systems, multi-room hookups, etc.)

All that was left was to call DirecTV and USSB, the two companies that "sell" the mini-dish programming, and place an order to activate the system; they do it instantly, via satellite.

"Everything is extra," he said.

Steve Quale, vice president of Twin Falls' Mel Quale Electronics Inc., said his company will sell the RCA mini-dishes when they become available and added that he likes what he's seen of the system.

But he wondered how long satellite systems can stay in the fast lane of the information highway.

"It's not going to be too much longer before cable companies start installing fiber-optic technology, which will give them the ability to deliver a signal through your phone line," he said. "If they can get 150 channels by owning a phone, I don't know how many people are going to want a (mini) satellite dish."

Huber sees no problem.

"It just means people will have more choices," he told Knight-Ridder. "Remember, every decade this century there's been a vast increase in the amount of information — radio over newspapers, TV over radio, CD-ROM over TV. Nobody has short-circuited yet."

Movie monsters bite into our cultural fears

Knight-Ridder News Service

Reel world

Neither the Frankenstein monster, who was resurrected last week, nor the vampire, who seeks new blood in this week's "Interview With the Vampire," is a simple, throwaway, casually conceived demon.

Each was invented or widely popularized to capture fears that gripped people at particular moments in time.

The reanimated corpse at the center of Mary Shelley's novel "Frankenstein," published in 1818, provided an apt industrial age metaphor for anxieties about the strange places that scientific experimentation might take them, the dark forces it might unleash.

And the vampire, who existed for centuries but came into special vogue with the publication of Bram Stoker's "Dracula" in 1897, touched a vein in Victorians. They were both terrified of sex and fascinated by it; here was a handsome, suave creature of the night who might attack you in bed, pressing his lips against the nape of your neck and unleashing the darkest passions.

These monsters live on in current movies because they have proven to be flexible metaphors, almost as relevant now as then. We still feel ambivalence toward aspects of scientific progress, particularly as it relates to computer technology and medicine. We still see a grisly consequence to sex and wanton passion; today those fears have their own acronym — AIDS.

But what kinds of movie monsters invented in recent decades speak to more uniquely modern concerns? Here's a look:

• The giant reptiles and big bugs in everything from "Godzilla" to "Them!"

The most popular monsters of the 1950s were some of nature's smallest critters grown large or prehistoric animals unleashed, all thanks to atomic energy.

The existence and rancor of these creatures, born during the chilliest season of the Cold War, articulated people's worries that the human race was developing technologies that would do it more harm than good.

It's no accident that "Godzilla," a sea creature supposedly awakened by atomic testing, was sired by the Japanese, who survived the atomic nightmares of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

• The marine predators in movies such as "Jaws" and "Piranha;" the terrestrial terrorists in "Grizzly" and "Prophecy."

Some of the most ardent political activism in the late 1960s and early 1970s focused on preservation of the environment. Can it be coincidence that the late 1970s saw so many movies in which nature bites back?

Sure, some of these movies are simply derivations and rip-offs of the hugely profitable "Jaws." But they can also be seen as reminders of nature's own will — and power — in a moment of callous disregard for it.

These movies convey our qualms about our sometimes tense relationship with the environment. Remember the scene from "Jaws" in which the belly of a dead shark is ripped open to reveal bits of refuse along the lines of hubcaps and license plates? Maybe the great white who is making meals of humans simply got tired of munching on pollution and seeing so many tacky bathing suits on the shoreline.

• The slashers and serial killers in such movies as "A Nightmare on Elm Street" and "Halloween."

These movies, most of which were released during the 1980s and early 1990s, belong to an era of escalating crime, growing public discussion about it and a welling dread about its random occurrence.

What monsters could be more relevant than these unstoppable murderers, human in form but superhuman in their thirst for blood and ability to survive? They catch their victims unaware. They invade homes, cars, schools, dreams.

Note that they frequently haunt suburban and bucolic environs, articulating people's dread of violent crime crossing the boundaries of urban centers.

Note, too, that their victims are most frequently teen-agers — and sexually active teen-agers at that. This detail, coming at a time of rampant drug use and and sexual precociousness among high-schoolers, evokes the parental dread that growing up too fast opens the door to disaster.

Mini-dish

ing ESPN, ESPN 2, pay-per-view events from boxing to college football and, by November, a dozen NFL games every Sunday.

• Specialty films from Disney to Playboy. Thirty audio-only channels of commercial-free, CD-quality music.

Cable: A typical monthly package including 12 local channels, 34 channels of sports, shopping, part-time movies, children's programs, comedy, all-news, weather, community access, Spanish and religious programming costs $26 to $30. Adding one Home Box Office channel is another $15 a month. Total: $41-$45.

Mini-dish: A typical monthly package without local channels, but including 33 channels of sports, all-news, weather, two Disney channels, seven Encore movie channels, shopping, a Canadian channel, sci-fi, Turner Classic Movies, comedy, all-day cartoons plus 30 audio-only music channels costs about $30. Adding a package of five HBO channels is about $11. Total: $41.

"It's almost too good to be true," Cain said.

According to Ron Victor, who runs The Sound Company stores in Twin Falls and Burley, it is too good to be true.

"There are going be an awful lot of unhappy owners of these dishes," Victor predicted. "You can expect those monthly rates to go up, and this system is going to be obsolete before long. There are better systems in the pipeline."

Victor said The Sound Company passed on the chance to carry the RCA mini-dishes.

"Basically, there's no comparison between mini-dishes and full-sized dishes in the service you get for the money," he said. "Standard dishes operate on a full-view system, which means you can pick up the signal from satellites all over the sky. With mini-dishes, you're locked at one point."

Victor added that there are many hidden charges with the mini-dishes.

Radio

Nash said KZDX hopes to raise its profile in Twin Falls by increasing the visibility of its on-air personalities, such as morning disc jockey Bob Thompson.

"We take requests and we do remotes here," he said. "We've already been to Dunken's (a downtown Twin Falls bar and restaurant) and the fair, and Mama Inez (a Twin Falls Mexican restaurant) sponsors a blues hour on Sundays."

Overall, adult contemporary-format stations command between 25 and 35 percent of the Twin Falls FM market, but Nash said that's not the ceiling for KZDX.

"The line between rock and country is becoming blurred; there are country fans who listen to rock and vice-versa," he said. "Look at Garth Brooks: He's in Europe touring with a rock group. And the country album of the year last year was a bunch of country stars singing Eagles songs."

Tennis coach fights off student's church volleys

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I have read and enjoyed your column for years, but have never seen my problem addressed. I am a tennis coach (male), in my mid-30s, and live in Florida.

I coach a woman I'll call Susan. She is intelligent and very sensitive. She and her husband are in their early 50s and quite well-to-do. I have worked with them twice a week for nearly eight years.

Four years ago, Susan was "born again." From being not particularly religious, she has gone to attending church every Sunday, Bible study three times a week, and holds prayer groups in her home several times a month. If the church needs money for anything, the people there ring up Susan – who immediately responds with a generous check. Her husband has stopped tearing his hair out and has resigned himself.

About six months ago, Susan began inviting me to church and telling me it was time I settled down and had a family, and church is a great place to meet single women. I am not interested in her suggestion, and I'm running out of excuses. I don't want to risk losing my best client. Abby, how can I get her off my back without hurting her feelings?

– TRAPPED IN RIGHT COURT

DEAR TRAPPED: Your well-intentioned client is probably unaware that her persistence is making you uncomfortable. Try this approach: "Susan, I really appreciate your concern, but I must come to this in my own time and in my own way." If she persists, repeat it. The ball's in your court! Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently passed away after a long illness, and many friends and relatives were very supportive during that time. His funeral was attended by such a large number of people, there weren't enough seats in the chapel to seat everyone.

"George" – one of my sons – was a pallbearer. A neighbor who attended the funeral had the nerve to ask me a few days later, "Has George cried yet?" What a terrible question! Even though George didn't cry at the funeral, I know his heart was heavy.

It's too bad we all can't cry when people expect us to. Besides, God gives us extra strength when we need it.

STILL GRIEVING

DEAR STILL: Shame on that insensitive neighbor. Tears are healing, and some people prefer to shed their tears in private.

DEAR ABBY: To the fellow who complained that his wife said she'd had enough sex to last her a lifetime:

We have been married for nearly 40 years, and my husband read a recent survey that stated "middle-aged couples have sex on the average of once a week."

He says we have to have sex once a day to offset the slack caused by that couple. It's sort of our civic duty, in order to maintain that average.

Last Cobain album comes as shock

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

For the few Nirvana fans who missed MTV's endless repeats of the band's "Unplugged" episode following Kurt Cobain's April suicide, the release of the "Nirvana: Unplugged in New York" album is fraught with emotion.

After months of sometimes misguided eulogies for a "generational spokesman," Cobain's vivid presence in this low-key but intense session comes as a pleasure and a sad shock.

"Unplugged in New York," recorded in November 1993, displays a more emotionally balanced Kurt Cobain than the sullen frontman on view at Nirvana's Williamsburg, Va., show just 11 days before. Seemingly more enthused by pared-down arrangements than the power-rock he'd expressed some weariness with, the singer gives some of his rawest, most expressive performances.

Cobain sounds as committed as he ever did, even when delivering a series of songs that proclaim "I swear I don't have a gun" ("Come As You Are"), "Don't expect me to cry for all the reasons you have to die" (the Vaselines' "Jesus Doesn't Want Me for a Sunbeam"), "I must have died alone" (David Bowie's "Man Who Sold the World") and "Still the life that's invidd of me" ("Pennyroyal Tea"). His nearly evangelical love for other people's music is demonstrated by the covers, and his generosity is shown by a three-song mini-set with guests Curt and Cris Kirkwood of the Meat Puppets.

Wood River Autumn Concert Series starts Sunday

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY – The Wood River Valley is gearing up for its Autumn Classical Concert Series.

The event, sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts & Humanities, will feature three concerts this year.

The Leontovych Piano Quartet will perform a dinner concert at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Sun Valley Lodge Dining Room.

The quartet is made up of members of the Leontovych String Quartet, with Robert Guralnik as pianist. The group will present a varied program of solos, duos, trios and quartets, with commentary. The program will include pieces by Mozart, Handel, Rachmaninoff and Dvorak.

The quartet, founded in Kiev, Ukraine, has performed at major international festivals and concert halls throughout Europe. The winner of several awards, the group has also performed at the United Nations and Harvard University.

Guralnik is Director of the Lake Mohonk Festival of the Arts at Lake Mohonk Mountain House in New York State.

Tickets for Sunday's concert, priced at $40 for Sun Valley Center members and $45 for non-members, are on sale at the Sun Valley Center Box Office. Doors will open at 5:45 p.m., with dinner to follow the recital at 8 p.m.

Pianist Awadagin Pratt will perform at 7 p.m. Nov. 27 at the Sun Valley Repertory's nexStage Theatre.

Pratt is the first Peabody Conservatory of Music student to graduate with a triple major in violin, piano and conducting and the first African-American classical instrumentalist to win the prestigious Naumburg International Piano Competition. He is also the first concert pianist to wear colorful shirts and dreadlocks.

Pratt has been the subject of numerous articles in the national press and was named one of 50 Leaders of Tomorrow by Ebony magazine. He has been featured on the "Today" show and on "CBS Sunday Morning."

At the Sun Valley concert, Pratt will perform selections from Brahms, Beethoven, Haydn, Chopin and Rachmaninoff, among others.

Tickets, priced at $15 for Sun Valley Center members and $18 for non-members, are on sale at the Sun Valley Center Box Office. An artist reception will follow the recital.

Robert Bluestone will perform at 7 p.m. Dec. 4 at the Sun Valley Repertory's nexStage Theatre.

The classical guitarist won a full scholarship to study and perform at the Andres Segovia Master Class in Santiago de Compostela, Spain. He has performed with noted musical groups throughout the United States. His widely acclaimed recordings, "Recital" and "Alchemy," are available on the Linares label.

At the Sun Valley concert, Bluestone will perform "English Suite" by John Duarte, "Leyenda" by I. Albeniz and "Pavane & Fantasy" by Anthony Holborne, among other selections.

Tickets, priced at $15 for Sun Valley Center members and $18 for non-members, are on sale at the Sun Valley Center Box Office. An artist reception will follow the recital.

For more information about the concert series, call the Sun Valley Center at 726-9491.

3 days, 2 CDs, but only 1 Woodstock '94

The shelves in his office at A&M Records are lined with tapes of every musical note played at Woodstock '94. He has listened to those tapes seven days a week — over and over — from the time the concert ended on the morning of Aug. 15, until early October.

Hamby was responsible for piecing together the commemorative compact disc of the summer concert. The two-disc set will be released Tuesday.

"I'm not sick of it," Hamby insisted in an interview, "although, I'm ready to take a breather from it."

Distilling three days of music into a 27-song package inevitably means a lot was left out, including a number of big-name artists. But Hamby's proud of what he's done and thinks he has captured the event's essence.

Some political choices went into the final product: No artist is represented with more than one song. But it also contains enough out-of-left-field selections that the album takes on its own personality.

While Woodstock '94 was a mixture of the old and new, Hamby's CD is weighted toward younger, hard-rocking artists.

"I didn't want this record to be presented from the veteran rock point of view," he said. "I thought they should be set among the new bands instead of the other way around."

As a result, the Allman Brothers Band, Santana and the Band are out. Collective Soul, Candlebox, Primus and Blind Melon are in.

At Woodstock, Hamby commanded a team of more than three dozen people making sure all the music was captured on tapes. Two remote recording trucks were parked behind each of the two main stages, and Hamby was camped in an office between them.

Since he promised to record all of Woodstock's music, he even scrambled to tape impromptu — and seemingly endless — performances by local bands on a makeshift stage behind the press tent. None of it made the album.

Tape was transported throughout the weekend to the Bearsville Studio about 10 miles away, where high-quality copies were made.

Then Hamby, an executive who helps guide the careers of A&M artists, returned to Los Angeles and began reviewing the tapes. He was too exhausted to count how many hours he spent listening.

There were basic decisions about format. Should there be one disc or 10? Should there be "theme discs" that appeal specifically to certain music fans or a general overview?

A&M settled on the two-disc set believing its $33.98 retail price would be within reach of the average fan. Ideas for specific discs, such as one with just "alternative music" or another solely with veterans of the first Woodstock, ultimately were rejected.

"The problem with that is, it's a very subjective decision and it sort of underestimates your audience's ability to discern," Hamby said. "Who says just because some kid may be a Green Day fan that they don't want to hear Bob Dylan? A lot of them do."

Handling all of the egos involved was surprisingly easy, he said.

Clear ground rules involving the musicians were set up: The artists had ultimate veto power over which of their songs were selected, but Hamby had the final say over what songs appeared on the album.

One or two disputes led to entirely dropping certain artists from the album. Hamby wouldn't name names.

For the most part, he said artists agreed with his choice, even if some persuading was needed. For example, Crosby, Stills and Nash wanted to include their performance of "Woodstock," appropriately enough. Hamby thought "Deja Vu" was a more impressive performance.

While some artists are represented by well-known songs, other choices were more obscure: Sheryl Crow's "Run, Baby, Run," Traffic's "Pearly Queen," Candlebox's "Arrow" and the Neville Brothers' cover of "Come Together."

"I wanted it to be a creative entity and held together as such," he said. "I didn't want it to be, 'OK, everybody, here's our next single.' If you hear a hit song, it's because it feels right. It was a good performance."

Nashville Network: Whole lot of country

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — There's nothing wrong with The Nashville Network that a little country music can't fix — over and over again.

You might think tired formats even network television has discarded, pearl-toothed, hair-sprayed personalities and "Hee Haw" reruns might sound like a recipe for disaster. But think again.

AP photo

Nashville notes

Peel away the veneer, and the earthy music that drives an industry makes TNN's best moments well worth watching.

Take the recent night neglected oldtimer Bobby Bare appeared on TNN's flagship show, "Music City Tonight." Between glad-handing and idle chatter that would have embarrassed Merv Griffin, Bare took center stage to sing his classic "Detroit City."

Bare put across the simple tale of homesickness and displacement so well that the blinking lights behind him on the Las Vegas-like stage simply ceased to matter.

That happens a lot on TNN.

"Our viewers really want to see all aspects of country music and country music artists," said Kevin Hale, the TNN vice president responsible for programming. "They want to see them perform, they want to know about their lives, they want to know about their families, they want to know how their tours are going and what their new albums are like."

So, perky as the packaging may be, the dark heart of country music fuels every show on TNN except the sports (NASCAR racing, rodeos and the like) that dominate on the weekends.

Where else but TNN are you likely to see Kris Kristofferson and Lorrie Morgan on "American Music Shop" making you believe they mean it on a duet of "Help Me Make It Through the Night"? Or even a genuine non-musical moment as when lapsed superstar Kenny Rogers admits his envy of Garth Brooks to Phyllis George on one of her Barbara Walters-type specials?

Sometimes you have to wade through some cow chips to get to the good stuff. "Country News" is TNN's "Entertainment Tonight," and it's only the lack of gratuitous sex that opens every episode of the show that makes it even watchable. Still, how many breathless reports about artists celebrating No. 1 hits do we need in a lifetime?

Emery, who distractedly hosted TNN's "Music City Tonight" predecessor until being pushed out in an effort to get a younger audience, still seems to have to struggle to maintain concentration on even the biggest stars.

On the brighter side, are "American Music Shop" a straight performance show that gives the venerable "Austin City Limits" a run for the money with interesting performer combos (such as the aforementioned Kristofferson-Morgan pairing).

New and promising for next year are in-depth biographies of country music greats from the producers of the "Biography" series on the Arts & Entertainment network.

Veteran Lee still looks for love

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — Johnny Lee's still looking for love. It's the title of both his autobiography and his gold-selling LP.

"I was a rebellious kid because my stepdad in my high school years was against my music and wouldn't allow me to rehearse with my band," he said Wednesday in a phone interview en route to his upcoming gig at Cactus Petes.

Lee

But the music wouldn't die, and Lee eventually landed a job at one of Mickey Gilley's clubs, working his way up to fronting Gilley's band and headlining for the country singer on tour.

When the production of the movie "Urban Cowboy" came to town, Lee got a part in the film and recorded several songs for the soundtrack.

That's how "Looking for Love" was born.

Lee followed up his success with hits like "Pickin' Up Strangers," "Cherokee Fiddle" and "Yellow Rose of Texas." Along came the TV shows and concert tours.

Lee has been on the road "nonstop" since 1978, he said, performing shows that are a mix of old and new. The precise mix depends on "the kind of crowd and what mood I'm in."

Or, as he put it, "If I get crazy, there's no telling what I'll do — I'm liable to just make a song up."

Lee's trek through private life has been bumpier than his experiences on stage.

He's divorced from his first wife, actress Charlene Tilton ("Dallas"), with whom he has a daughter, now 12. He has a 4-year-old son by his second wife, who left him three weeks ago.

"I don't know if she's my future ex-wife or not," said Lee, now 48.

But life moves forward, and there are good times, too.

These days, Lee lives in Palm Springs, Calif., close to a golf course.

"I'm a golf freak," he said. "I shot a 75 day before yesterday and a 78 yesterday."

He's halfway through a new album and is planning to shoot a video of one of the songs. It's a song Garth Brooks wrote called "Heaven Sent," and it's a true story about rodeo bulls, bull riders and clowns.

Lee has also just finished a children's book, entitled "Pookie the Whale."

It's about kids not getting too far from their moms and dads and families, Lee said. It's about love.

Tickets available

Johnny Lee will perform Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday and again Nov. 20, and 22-23 at Cactus Petes Resort Casino in Jackpot. The 8 and 11 p.m. shows are cocktails only. For information and reservations, call 1-800-821-1103.

Home on the video range: 'City Slickers II' reaches store shelves

The Times-News

New videos this week in Twin Falls stores:

"City Slickers II" (PG-13). Billy "The Kidder" Crystal saddles up the same old gag in "City Slickers II," a tale of yuppies in chaps who live life to the fullest by vacationing out West. Unfortunately, even a trip to the Roy Rogers toppings bar would have been more imaginative.

In the far superior first "Slickers," Crystal's character was having trouble facing his 39th birthday. Now it's his 40th — a circumstance that sucks up about 40 minutes of screen time, most of which is lavished upon the increasingly ridiculous star, who is only half kidding when he struts about topless before his mirror.

New videos

It's enough to make Wyatt urp, but Crystal's vanity knows no bounds. When the story finally moseys on out to Moab, Utah, Crystal continues to hog the camera in the role of Mitch, the greatest guy you'd ever want to meet.

This time Mitch, his squirrelly friend Phil (Daniel Stern reprising the role) and his no-account kid brother, Glen (Jon Lovitz), are on a treasure hunt, guided by a map Mitch inherited from Curly, the leathery trail boss who died in "City Slickers." Jack Palance, who won an Oscar as Curly in 1992, returns as his twin, Duke, a seafarer who shares his brother's contempt for city boys. But he mellows somewhat as the four ride through scenic red-rock canyons and the music swells to levels that ordinarily mean Jesus is on His way.

Director Paul Weiland, an Englishman noted for children's TV programming and award-winning commercials, makes good use of the awesomely sculptured landscape. But most of the jokes are simply recycled from the original, and the rest seem to have been resurrected from Gabby Hayes's saddlebags. (Washington Post) (Blockbuster, Video West)

"Little Big League" (G). In Andrew Scheinman's "Little Big League," a 12-year-old baseball trivia buff inherits the Minnesota Twins from his grandfather and, seeing as how the manager can't rouse them to victory, decides to run the club himself. It looks as though the kid might have directed the movie, too.

In fact, the whole project might have been dreamed up by a bunch of kids sitting around at a baseball card trading fair, arguing about the relative worth of the autographs of Ty Cobb and Ricky Henderson, and imagining how much better they'd be at managing a team than some of those beer-bellied geezers spitting on their feet out there.

"Hey, what if one of us was to become the owner of a team and could do whatever we wanted ..."

That kid is Billy Heywood (Luke Edwards), the worst player and best strategist on his little league team, and, as it happens, the grandson of Twins owner Thomas Heywood (Jason Robards). Thomas and Billy, whose father died years before, are as close as a hot dog and relish, and when the old man dies, he leaves his team to the kid.

Soon, Billy fires his insubordinate manager (Dennis Farina) and, with the blessings of the league, his mom (Ashley Crow) and school officials, takes over the job and begins lecturing his dismayed players about the joy of baseball. Geez, guys, if you'd just remember how much fun this is, you'd win. And, of course, they do.

This fantasy is at least as plausible as a little leaguer having his broken arm mend with a 100 mph fastball, which was the premise of last summer's baseball hit "Rookie of the Year." And "Little Big League," with its real team names, real players (look for the Yankees' Paul O'Neill), real ballparks, and actual historical anecdotes, offers up a lot more baseball savvy than we've come to expect from Hollywood movies. (Newsday) (Video West, Blockbuster)

"Hand Gun" (R). Shown at last spring's Seattle International Film Festival, this deliberately amoral thriller stars Treat Williams as a hot-headed thief, Paul Schulze as his con-artist brother and Seymour Cassel as their criminal father. It's been compared with "Reservoir Dogs." (Knight-Ridder News Service) (Video West, Blockbuster)

Also:

Video West: "With Honors," "Even Cowgirls Get the Blues."

Blockbuster: "Tryst," "With Honors," "You So Crazy."

Miniseries hits VCRs before appearance on network TV

Seattle Times

A few miniseries have turned up on cassette shortly after they've been broadcast, but "Texas" is the first to appear in stores before it plays on the network. Available this week on tape, it won't be shown on ABC-TV until spring 1995.

Produced for $12 million and based on James A. Michener's 1985 novel, it begins in 1821 and covers much the same ground as John Wayne's "The Alamo." John Schneider plays Davy Crockett (Wayne's role). David Keith is Jim Bowie, Stacy Keach is Sam Houston and Patrick Duffy is Stephen Austin, "the father of Texas," who was instrumental in colonizing the territory when it was under the command of General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna.

The three-hour-plus production was partly filmed earlier this year at Alamo Village, a re-creation of the 1836 Alamo site that was used for "The Alamo" 35 years ago. The director is Richard Lang, who made the 1978 miniseries, "The Word."

Aaron Spelling, one of the executive producers, claims this pattern of video-first, network second, may become common, especially with large-scale productions that could defray their costs this way. Republic Pictures Home Video is releasing the double-cassette tape, which is rental-priced.

For several years now it's been common for movies to be produced for video, then turn up on cable and or in syndication. The latest example is last year's "Prehysteria!," a family comedy about five minidinosaurs that was released at the same time "Jurassic Park" turned up in theaters. It quickly set sales records for a made-for-video cassette.

"It later turned up on cable, and now it's spawned a sequel: "Prehysteria! 2," in which the five prehistoric creatures help a rich kid outsmart a nasty governess who wants to send him to military boarding school. Aside from the dinos, none of the original cast members returns.

What's what?

Q. Wasn't the "Bearded Lady" of circus fame really a man?

A. Not the original one in P.T. Barnum's circus. She suffered from what doctors now call "Naevus Pilosus," a term for enormous birthmarks with hair growing out of them.

What the sociologists call the "Anna Karenina Principle" takes its name from the title of Leo Tolstoy's novel. It's the opening line: "Happy families are alike; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way."

Report in Brazil's farmers don't grow wheat.

Scholars identify the Lankaura Sutra as a 10,500 word Buddhist tract. In the past, they've debated at length a legendary claim that Sutoku, an Emperor of Japan, copied it in his own blood. But the debate has stopped. Now that ancient artifacts can be tested with DNA, they don't want to talk about it anymore, evidently.

Q. What was the first novel ever?

A. Lady Murasaki's "The Tale of Genji," Set in Japanese court life of the 10th century.

How does the annual rainfall in your town stack up against the national average of 34.67 inches? It's said most people who bother to check it out are surprised by the comparison.

Great Britain is getting too many wild rabbits again, evidently. Controllers over there reportedly have started scattering fields with rabbit contraceptive pellets.

Q. Didn't the Russians recently find great caches of Siberian ivory?

A. Not so recently. Between 1800 and 1900, about 200 tons of ivory were shipped from Siberia to London. It wasn't elephant ivory. No elephants in Siberia. It came from the 10-foot-long tusks of woolly mammoths frozen there in an Ice Age.

Social activities accelerate in December, you'll travel, you'll be saying, "This is one of my happiest holiday seasons!" July and September your most memorable months in 1995.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Light shines through, eliminating darker areas of your life. Make fresh start, spotlight independence, originality, romance. Offer received from hospital, institution, theater. Hot ticket!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Moon in Pisces relates to ability to win friends, influence people, to become "Svengali" to "Trilby." Personal magnetism shines, you'll exude sex appeal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Individual who attempted to "dictate to you" will lose authority. Focus on status, prestige, diversity, humor. Secret meeting results in upgrading your position.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Puzzle pieces form pattern - you'll read them accurately. Moon position highlights philosophy, metaphysics, journey.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Refuse to take people, situations for granted - explore, insist on directions, names, motivations. Your role is that of "investigative reporter," Gemini, Virgo persons will figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Opposition proves to be "soft touch." Don't fear the unknown, make invest in art, luxury items. Gift received represents "symbol of love," Libra involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obtain added wisdom from Virgo message. Play "mystery role." You get things done in almost magical manner. Focus on intrigue, ability to get "backstage."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Peasant takes over! What you do, do with enthusiasm. Emphasis on organization, deadline, creating order out of chaos. You'll be saying, "I am going to win this fight!" Capricorn involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-distance communication relates to study group, special convention possibly being held in foreign nation. You're nobled at home, travel must wait.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't be held back by those who are "wedded" to outworn procedures. Trips, relatives, fresh concepts dot scenario. Popularity increases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Questions arise concerning property, home, family, possibility of business partnership, marriage. Pisces moon relates to income, profit margin, accounting procedures. Cancer native involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Cycle high, take initiative, don't be thwarted by one who lacks imagination, faith. Make personal appearances, wear shades of sea green. Accent glamour, humor, mystery. Gemini involved.

By Chris Hewitt
Knight-Ridder News Service

AP photo

Movie review

Yes, Tom Cruise is good in "Interview With the Vampire." No, it's not really scary. Yes, there's lots of blood. No, it's not as homoerotic as the book. Yes, the vague pedophilia and dripping veins are unsettling. Any other questions?

Since its publication 18 years ago, "Interview With the Vampire's" conception of monsters as tortured souls — trapped by their need to kill and the pain of living forever without human comforts — has been repeatedly ripped off. "The Lost Boys," "Bram Stoker's Dracula," even Wim Wender's masterpiece about angels, "Wings of Desire," all owe their conceptions of life undead to Anne Rice's novel, which is told from the vampire's point of view. As a result, those who read the book now (or attend the movie) may not see why early fans were so thrilled by Rice's vision.

That's a disappointment, but the bloody "Interview With the Vampire" still has the capacity to surprise. Its new ending, for instance, is perfectly in keeping with Rice's style, but will also give fans of the book a snappy surprise. The twist was apparently conceived by director Neil Jordan ("The Crying Game") instead of Rice, but otherwise blood is thicker than auteur: Jordan's fabulous-looking movie is unusually faithful to the book.

Other surprises: It's very funny in a sick way (as the vampire Lestat gavottes with a corpse, he cracks, "There's still life in the-old lady yet"). And all these years we've been mispronouncing the main vampire's names — Lestat (Cruise) rhymes with "cat" and "Louis" (Pitt) rhymes with "screwy."

Louis's is screwed up because he misses the human emotions that vampires are supposed to outgrow. Brad Pitt gives Louis an unearthly beauty (next to him, pretty boy Cruise looks like Don Knotts), and his halting, restrained voice as he tells his story to a nameless interviewer (Christian Slater) is a constant reminder of Louis' soul-mauling pain. When Lestat taunts him for his unwillingness to dive in for a carotid cocktail, Louis sadly replies, "Forgive me if I have a lingering respect for life."

Lestat has no such respect, and Cruise almost completely vanishes into his evil skin. When he gets angry, he accidentally shifts into Cruise control, but the actor mostly makes smart choices, especially in the intensely passionate, bloody moment when he transforms his beloved Louis into a vampire. Cruise fully captures the monster of Rice's book — brilliant, sarcastic and cruel.

His cruelest act is creating Claudia, the child vampire. Over a period of 30 years, Claudia becomes a woman emotionally, but she's trapped in a little-girl body. Clad in bonnets and pinafores, she looks like Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, but Claudia is closer to Rosemary's baby. She kills voraciously, like a child on a trip through Toys 'R Us, "I-want-it-Mommy"-ing at everything.

As Claudia, 11-year-old Kirsten Dunst is unsettlingly good, shifting easily from childish petulance to the mature anger of a disturbed woman. Dunst's initial forays into vampirism are weirdly funny (her piano career is cut short because she keeps feasting on her teachers), but her final, demented scenes are anything but.

Dunst almost rescues the draggy middle third of the movie, which takes place in 19th-century Paris. In one scene, Dunst uses her expressive eyes to tell us she knows she is losing Louis to Armand (Antonio Banderas), the leader of the French undead. Unfortunately, Banderas' heavy, brocade costumes seem to have turned his tongue to brocade, too — he's Acting and Every Word He Says Is Capitalized. By the end of this section in not-so-gay Paree, you'll feel like the one who's had the blood sucked out of you.

Those scenes drive a stake into the heart of the movie, but it springs back to life for the dazzling finale, which makes it all but inevitable that Rice's "Vampire Chronicles" will continue. (Mall Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

Allen tries to 'Clause' his way to top in films

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Magic Valley this weekend. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and reviews are by the Los Angeles Times.

"The Santa Clause" (PG). A holiday season fantasy comedy starring "Home Improvements'" Tim Allen as a divorced dad trying to win back his son's affections when both are whisked off to an incredible adventure once Allen's dons a Santa suit. Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"The War" (PG-13). Kevin Costner and Elijah Wood star as father and son in this drippy heartfelt movie about the value of goodness and the awfulness of violence. The most memorable character is the 800-year-old oak tree that supports a tree fort under siege. (Twin Cinema)

"Double Dragon" (PG-13). The popular video game of the same name moves to the big screen with zest and humor, although a spectacular envisioning of Los Angeles some years after the Big Quake plus state-of-the-art special effects shows its overly slender plot. Mark Dascascos and Scott Wolf play teen-aged martial artists who possess one-half of an ancient and powerful talisman. With Robert Patrick as the evil tycoon who has the other half. (Twin Cinema)

"Forrest Gump" (PG-13). Director Robert Zemeckis uses the story of a holy fool whose IQ of 75 doesn't stop him from succeeding in life as a way to examine the turbulent recent decades of American history through a genially cracked lens. (Shoshone Showhouse)

"Love Affair" (PG-13). This second remake of the 1939 weepie that was one of the great romantic films of its day tries hard to be faithful to its source but can't duplicate the original's magic. Producer and co-writer Warren Beatty and wife Annette Bening co-star as would-be lovers who have to endure more trials than Job, and Katharine Hepburn has a cameo. Despite everyone's best intentions, however, the film by and large remains earthbound. (Twin Cinema)

"Mary Shelley's Frankenstein" (R). Directed by and starring Kenneth Branagh but, more importantly, produced by the same team that made "Bram Stoker's Dracula" such an unholy mess. Filled with the kind of full-bore hysteria that creates headaches rather than arouses emotions, this loud and tacky monster-mash has problems even Robert De Niro's effective acting can't solve. (Twin Cinema, Burley Theater, Ace Theatre of Wendell)

"The Mask" (PG-13). Proving that "Ace Ventura: Pet Detective" was no fluke, Jim Carrey is revealed here as a comic actor of considerable charm and talent as timid bank clerk Stanley Ipkiss. And the special effects that illustrate what happens when Ipkiss puts on a mysterious mask are also very strong. (Jerome Cinema)

"Pulp Fiction" (R). The new film by writer-director Quentin Tarantino has been getting the star treatment since it won the Palme d'Or at Cannes, but it is only sporadically effective. Despite strong writing and a revivified performance from John Travolta, its attempts to shock can feel strained and its self-referential quality can be tedious. (Magic Lantern Theater of Ketchum)

"Quiz Show" (PG-13). Directed by Robert Redford and centering on the rigged quiz show scandals of the late 1950s. By splitting its focus among three characters (finely played by Ralph Finnes, John Turturro and Rob Morrow, Paul Attanasio's script does not shy away from a situation where even the nominal heroes end up feeling complicit. (Jerome Cinema)

"The River Wild" (PG-13). Though the scenes of white-water rafting on roller coaster waterways are exciting, the real thrill here is seeing Meryl Streep giving a rip-roaring performance as a former guide forced to protect her family from floating miscreants. Directed by Curtis Hanson. (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Gooding Cinema, Ace Theatre of Wendell, Magic Lantern Theater of Ketchum)

"The Specialist" (R). Sylvester Stallone and Sharon Stone star in this sub-par actioner about an explosive expert trying to blow up a Miami crime family. James Woods and Rod Steiger relieve the tedium with some world-class scenery chewing. (Twin Cinema, Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"Stargate" (PG-13). Kurt Russell and James Spader star in this clunky, cheesy but fairly enjoyable sci-fi actioner about a time portal to a far-away galaxy that colonized ancient Egypt. Jaye Davidson steals the show as a fey, hermaphroditic sun-god Ra. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

'Planets' put spin on fame and their own brand of rap

Digable Planets' 1993 debut album, "Reachin' (A New Refutation of Time and Space)," put jazz-influenced rap on the map.

Groups had previously dabbled in the style, mainly using jazz beats as background. But the New York-based trio — Ishamael (Butterfly) Butler, Ann (Ladybug) Vieira and Craig (Doodlebug) Irving — shrewdly married the vocals to the instrumentals.

The raps are cool, with a breezy, elusive feel, like one of those vintage Miles Davis solos with constantly shifting melodic lines. The Digable sound has its roots in the intellectual, jazz-influenced bohemian culture of the '40s and '50s and owes more to jazz than hip-hop.

Stardom was the last thing the threesome expected when they teamed up four years ago in New York as college students. Butler, 24, who formed the group, is as cool and breezy as his raps. In a recent interview, he talked about the group's future, its new album, "Blowout Comb," and stardom.

Q: Has it been difficult adjusting to being in a hit group?

A: It's not easy. It's tough to learn how to deal with the record industry. There's this constant struggle of trying to gain control over what is represented as your art. It's a constant struggle — business vs. art. You don't realize that until you're deep into it. That struggle is always going on. It takes a lot of energy — too much sometimes.

Q: Have you had any hassles now that you're more recognizable to the public?

A: Some hassles, I guess. But we're not that famous so it's not a real problem. We try to keep it all in perspective. We're not the kind of people who are going to get crazed by fame.

Q: How is the new album different from the first one?

A: We made a concerted effort to be more literal and less abstract. The first album is lyrically much more abstract. The language is so personal it's almost cryptic. Nobody who isn't real hip can really understand it.

Q: Do you have a sense that people really understand the first album?

A: No. I think most people were reacting to the sound of the album rather than what we're saying. Maybe some bought it because their friends did. People will be able to understand this one much easier.

Q: How about musical differences?

A: The first one used a lot of different kinds of music, old jazz as well as funk and fusion. The new one has much less traditional jazz. It's a new kind of thing for us. It's a whole bunch of stuff put together. It doesn't sound like any type of jazz — be-bop, fusion or free jazz. I don't think it sounds like any kind of jazz. It's interesting combinations.

Q: Why did you decide to take that musical route?

A: It wasn't a conscious decision. We don't work that way. We're real loose. We don't have a great plan. We just do what feels right — things just happen. We all write. We get inspired by something, and we write it down and use it.

Q: Why did you first decide to incorporate jazz into hip-hop?

A: The nature of hip-hop as a resourceful art form is to use the resources that were close at hand. Growing up, we didn't have the money to learn how to play instruments. When we were looking for musical backing to the raps, we went to the things that were already there. Those jazz records were already on hand. My parents were avid jazz fans, so I was familiar with it. Nobody else was doing much with jazz and hip-hop, so it seemed like an area that was open to innovation.

Q: Will jazz ever be a dominant force in hip-hop?

A: I doubt it. Hip-hop is always changing. It changes so fast that something like jazz would never get a chance to dominate it. Jazz still doesn't have great mass appeal. If something was to dominate hip-hop it would have to have great mass appeal.

Q: What rappers influenced you?

A: Public Enemy did in a big way. They make you think politically, and they make sense about black-nationalism issues. They knew how to get their message across on those early albums and really make people listen. They showed that you can get a point across about black nationalism and be entertaining too. I learned from that.

Q: Do you think hip-hop is too [illegible]olous?

A: I'm not sure I'd say that, but there's room in it for social and political messages. It doesn't always have to be a party. Hip-hop ultimately is about life, and life isn't a party — particularly when you're black. There should be things in hip-hop that deal with serious issues about being black in this country. We try to do that in our music.

Wisconsin tailback faces cocaine charge

MADISON, Wis. – University of Wisconsin tailback Brent Moss, the MVP of the Rose Bowl game last Jan. 1, has been arrested on a cocaine charge, police said Thursday.

He was taken into custody Wednesday night on a police charge of possession of cocaine base with intent to deliver, Lt. Jill Klubertanz said. The arrest took place about 9:45 p.m. on the city's South Side after observation by an officer, she said.

Moss remained in custody this Thursday morning, Klubertanz said, but no formal charges were immediately filed by the Dane County District Attorney's Office.

Report: Former Kings' owner will resign remaining posts

LOS ANGELES – Embattled former Los Angeles Kings owner Bruce McNall, under investigation by a federal grand jury for bank fraud, has agreed to resign as president and governor of the NHL team, a newspaper reported Thursday.

The Daily News of Los Angeles said the Kings are expected to make the announcement after federal investigators file charges against McNall, which the newspaper quoted sources as saying is likely to happen early next week.

Five others have been charged in the bank loan fraud scam allegedly directed by McNall, with three already entering guilty pleas. The other two reportedly have also agreed to plead guilty in the matter.

McNall, 44, has reportedly agreed to plead guilty to four criminal counts. The Daily News said he will be charged with bank fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy.

Irish receiver charged with theft, forgery scheme

CHICAGO – Notre Dame receiver Michael Miller is charged in Texas in what prosecutors call a scheme to steal and forge checks to buy $50,000 worth of airline tickets, clothes and alcohol.

Miller turned himself in Wednesday, one day after Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz announced without explanation that Miller had left the university.

Miller was being held on $5,000 bond.

The Kimberly High duo of Jessica McEwen, 6-foot-3, and Chaunda Stark, 6-foot-2, hope to take the Bulldogs to the state tournament.

Kimberly duo hopes to keep 'Dawgs' towering over Canyon

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY – After being cut from the seventh grade girls' basketball team, Jessica McEwen never dreamed she'd be moved up to varsity her sophomore year.

Both McEwen and Stark will hit the hardwood for the Kimberly Bulldogs this season.

"I felt like an extra wheel," Stark said.

But Stark had been playing basketball since fifth grade. McEwen must now make the transition after only two years of basketball experience.

McEwen moved from Snowflake, Ariz., to Kimberly after seventh grade.

"I didn't like basketball so I wasn't even going to try out," McEwen said. "I probably wouldn't have played in eighth grade but I wanted to make friends."

Now the 14-year-old is setting goals and focusing on her future.

"I just want to play tough," McEwen said. "I want to get up and get more boards than in the past."

Stark's goals are more concrete.

"I want to average nine rebounds a game," Stark said. "And I don't want to foul out in all my games."

Last year Stark said she fouled out in half of the games and at the state tournament. "I'm aggressive. When I go for a check, I get called."

This year Stark can afford to be aggressive with her twin tower lurking on the bench.

Coach John Miller is also excited to have two of the conference's tallest players on his team.

"Aside from the luxury of bringing her (McEwen) along nice and slow, we don't have to throw her out in the first game and say 'boom' you are starting," Miller said.

Bulldogs reload for another shot at conference crown

A-3 preview
A-2 preview – D3

One thing is certain about the District 4, Class A-3 girls' basketball field: the Kimberly High School girls' basketball team is loaded.

The Bulldogs, who finished second in last year's Canyon Conference tournament, return four starters and a wealth of talent.

The conference's coaches agree Kimberly is the team to beat. What the coaches can't agree on is which teams fall into the next three positions.

"Kimberly will be a state power," Filer coach Bruce Lenington said. "We probably have the toughest team in the state in our conference with Kimberly."

Valley, the runner-up in last year's state tournament, returns only one starter but has the luxury of bringing five players from a junior varsity team that won the conference.

Filer returns three starters and looks to challenge for the second-place spot in the conference. Declo should contend for the top four spot. Wendell begins the season with a new coach and a new attitude. Glenns Ferry returns three starters, including two sophomores and one junior, and Gooding will hope that the two returning starters and younger players can gain experience quickly.

Kimberly Bulldogs

"We're going to spread scoring all over the place," Miller said. "I'm lucky to have kids like this."

The Bulldogs lost the opening two games of the Class A-3 state basketball tournament last year, after finishing the regular season and district tournament at 12-12.

Returning starters Tracy Arrossa and Laura McKinlay each averaged 10 points a game last year.

Arrossa, at 5-feet-11-inches, is a threat inside as well as outside. The senior grabbed eight rebounds and collected two blocked shots per game last year.

McKinlay offers bulange at guard. The 5-foot-8-inch senior averaged four assists and four steals a game.

Heimuli paces BYU past Aztecs

The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Fullback Hema Heimuli rushed for 115 yards and two touchdowns to lead No. 23 Brigham Young to a 35-28 victory over San Diego State Thursday night.

Heimuli also caught six passes for 63 yards and one touchdown as BYU (9-2 overall, 6-1 in the Western Athletic Conference) remained in a tie with Colorado State. Utah is 5-1 in league play.

BYU's Jamal Willis rushed for 25 yards and one touchdown. He now has 1,019 for the season. He became the first BYU player to have two separate 1,000-yard seasons.

John Walsh, the BYU quarterback, passed for 392 yards and two touchdowns. He moved ahead of Steve Young, now the San Francisco 49ers' quarterback, with 8,166 yards, fourth on the school's career passing list.

Heimuli scored on runs of 31 and 5 yards and had a 19-yard touchdown pass.

Willis' touchdown, on a 7-yard run, gave BYU a 28-14 lead with 11:56 left in the third quarter. The Cougars led 35-14 when Heimuli scored his final touchdown with 14:39 left in the game.

But Billy Blanton led the Aztecs (4-6, 2-5) to a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns to make things close.

Blanton finished with four touchdown passes, including two to Curtis Shearer. Those went for 68 and eight yards. He had an 8-yard scoring toss to DeAndre Maxwell and a 17-yard touchdown pass to Ray Peterson.

Gray shines in CSI win

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Sophomore Ed Gray held it together until the rest of the team found its rhythm Thursday night and hoisted College of Southern Idaho past the Northwest Nazarene jayvees 99-60.

Gray tallied most of his 24 points in the first half as the Eagles struggled to find an offensive punch. Along the way he put on a solid display of basketball ability with a succession of drives and assists.

"When Ed gets in one of those zones, you get the feeling the others just stand around to watch him instead of staying involved in the game," Irons said.

This game basically was the end of the beginning of the season after four scrimmages and a couple of jayvee games.

CSI gets into the toughest two weeks of its season Saturday by hosting a quick Western Wyoming team. That begins at 8 p.m., set back an hour from the usual starting time to preclude any conflict with the Region 18 women's volleyball tournament slated Saturday afternoon in the gymnasium.

Monday the Eagles have their annual international exhibition, hosting the Slovenian national junior team at 7 p.m.

Student and season passes will not be honored for this one and seating is open. All proceeds go to the CSI athletic scholarship fund. Prices will be $3 for adults, $2 for students and $9 for a family for four or more.

The annual K&T Steel tournament winds up the week.

The Eagles had only some momentary problems in keeping the lead against NNC. The Crusaders were tied at 7-7 with 16:55 showing when CSI went on a 20-2 run that pretty much decided the game. But the streak took nearly nine minutes.

After that NNC cut back to within 11 a couple of times before Gray and Mantia Callender closed the half with six points each. Freshman Marcus Wallace collected 16 of his 20 point in the second half to push the margin upward.

"Defensively we still have a lot of work to do," said Irons. "That's where I'm most frustrated right now. If we get all five players clicking, we can cause an opponent a lot of trouble but we have trouble getting to that level and more trouble trying to stay there."

Worthy, last link to Laker glory, retires

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. – James Worthy, sometimes lost in the enormous shadows of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson when the Los Angeles Lakers dazzled the NBA with "Showtime," retired Thursday, severing the final link to those glory days.

Worthy

And neither had a nickname like "Big Game James," which Worthy lived up to time and again during a 12-year career.

Worthy, 33, started this season on the injured list because of tendinitis in his left knee. He left the team last month when his mother died in North Carolina, and hasn't been with the Lakers since.

"It's been a wonderful, wonderful 12 years," Worthy said during a packed news conference at the Forum, where Showtime played to rave reviews during the 1980s and where the team plays its first home game of this season on Friday night.

"This is probably the happiest day of my life; at the same time, it's a sad occasion," he said. "I just got to the point where I

Newsday

Nebraska has produced offensive linemen as if Tom Osborne learned his coaching from Henry Ford. One after another, they come down the assembly line — power at one station, then agility, then strength, then an all-America certificate and an Outland Trophy. Next model, please.

Dave Rimington won two Outlands wearing Cornhuskers red. Dean Steinkuhler and Will Shields also won the trophy, which goes to the best interior lineman in the nation. Nebraska offensive linemen have won four Outlands and been named to 11 all-America teams in Osborne's 21 seasons as head coach.

None of them, however, achieved what senior tackle Zach Wiegert did Saturday. According to the coaching staff, Wiegert played a perfect game against Kansas. He received the highest grade from the coaches on every play.

Osborne announced it as laconically as he says everything else. He speaks with all the fervor of an old-timer on a screen porch. "If you're out there for 70 snaps, that's something I don't remember ever happening before," Osborne said. " ... Occasionally, you have a second-unit player go in for 10 snaps and do it. I'm sure it has happened before in 30 years (Osborne began as a Nebraska assistant in 1963). But Zach had one of the finest games we've ever had an offensive lineman have."

Wiegert is 6-foot-5, 300 pounds. He has started 34 consecutive games dating to his sophomore season. In his career, he has allowed one sack, which he maintains wasn't his fault. The Nebraska publicists call him "the pancake-maker," referring to a block that ends with the defender flat as a flapjack. Wiegert has 96 this season. "We grade on a 2.0 scale," Wiegert said. "You get a 2 if you block the right guy and block him well. You get a 1 if you block the right guy and don't do it well. A zero is if you block the wrong guy."

Linemen get a grade on every play, and coaches come up with an average. Anything over a 1.9 is the equivalent of Phi Beta Kappa. Against Kansas, Wiegert graded out at 2.0. "I still didn't have a perfect game. I could have done a better job."

What is better than a perfect score? is this that realm of "110 percent" that coaches always bring up? "Oh, I didn't put my guy on the ground every time," Wiegert said. "That would be a perfect game."

Once in 30 years. Once in a generation. A pro bowler rolls a 300 game a couple of times a year. There have been 16 perfect games pitched in major-league baseball history.

"I don't think anyone on the team would ever think they graded a 2.0 after a game," Wiegert said. "I play a lot of golf. You go out and shoot a 78 or 80, then one day you shoot a 72. You think, 'Great,' but two or three times, you could have made a putt (but didn't)."

Syracuse linebacker Dan Conley is a rarity among college athletes. Not because of his physical courage, which is unsurpassed by anyone in any sport. He played three quarters last week against Miami several days after undergoing his 10th knee surgery.

Conley had the gift of eloquence before his right knee sabotaged him. Now, at age 24, in his sixth season, he has acquired perspective. Long after the Miami game ended Saturday, Conley held court. He understood this stage wouldn't be his much longer. Although his knee, wrapped in ice, continued to throb, he stood and talked as long as anyone listened.

"This has been the best thing in my life, coming back and playing," said Conley, who missed all of last season. "Whether we go 5-5 or 12-0 is not the point. The point was to come back and show these kids how I play. I've had a fantastic time so far."

After the game, someone told Conley that, in the second half, Miami sophomore linebacker Ray Lewis taunted the Orangemen by telling them to look at the scoreboard.

"The guys with class are on the offensive line," Conley said. "(Lewis) has a lot to learn about life. Too bad; one of these days it will sneak up on him.

"I play the game like (Dick) Butkus and Jack Lambert. I don't talk. It's almost embarrassing, as good as they are, they're very unclassy people. That's the way they have been. He's a very young kid; two years out of high school. Don't mistreat it. You don't have it for long."

George Foreman says Mike Tyson is the only fighter he'd return to the ring for.

Mom holds key to Foreman's future

HOUSTON (AP) — George Foreman, a newly recrowned heavyweight champion, might climb back into the ring, but it looks like it could take ex-champ Mike Tyson and big George's mother to make it happen.

"Tyson would be the only guy that would make me feel the spice to fight again," Foreman said Thursday. "I'd fight him instantly."

Tyson is in prison in Indiana serving a sentence for rape. He is eligible to be released next May.

Foreman, though, added he would fight again only if he received permission from his mother, Nancy. And she's not saying.

"Oh! No comment!" Nancy Foreman said, laughing. "I'll let him know first and we'll sit down in the next couple of days and talk it over."

Foreman, who turns 46 in January, called a news conference at his Houston gym to revel in his renewed status as heavyweight title-holder. He warned everyone not to question his age, whatever it is.

"I'm not going to allow anyone to look down on me because of my age," he said. "If you say my knees are gone, then I'll retire, or that I can't punch, then I'll retire. But I can fight at this age.

"Get hold of my coat and let's fly into the next century!"

Foreman's improbable second career culminated with a 10th-round knockout of Michael Moorer in Saturday in Las Vegas, giving him the WBA and IBF titles.

Ewing, Knicks outgun Shaq; Dumars lifts Pistons to win

Pro basketball

Detriot's Terry Mills, left, and Indiana's Antonio Davis chase down a loose ball Thursday in Auburn Hills, Mich.

O'Neal, who had 46 points and 20 rebounds the previous night in an overtime win at Charlotte, scored eight straight points to cut New York's lead to 99-97 with 49 seconds remaining. He grabbed a defensive rebound, then muscled inside for a basket to tie it with 11 seconds left.

But Ewing, who had been hampered by four fouls most of the second half, won it for New York. He finished with 24 points on 11-for-17 shooting but had only four rebounds to 17 by O'Neal.

After Anthony Bowie's free throw with 8:32 to play cut the Knicks' lead to one, the Knicks quickly stretched it to 87-81 on a 3-pointer by John Starks, only his second basket of the game.

New York, using its defensive pressure, kept its lead until the final two minutes, when O'Neal took over.

Leading 54-43 at halftime, the Knicks played only the first two minutes of the quarter with Ewing after he picked up his fourth foul. O'Neal got 10 points in the period, helping bring Orlando to 68-67 on a basket with 2:53 left in the quarter. But he immediately committed his fourth foul and left the game.

A basket and four free throws by Hardaway, who had 12 in the period, kept the Magic close going into the final quarter.

Both teams started out hot, shooting better than 50 percent. But Orlando sturggled in the second quarter, missing 18 of 24 shots from the field.

The Magic fell behind 50-36 on a layup by Derek Harper with 3:07 left in the first half. Anderson scored his team's last five points of the half to bring Orlando with 11 points.

Ewing had 16 first-half points despite playing only 12 minutes because of three fouls. Harper had 11 points and Oakley 10.

Pistons 112, Pacers 110

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. – Joe Dumars scored four points in the final minute and the Detroit Pistons picked up a 112-110 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

Detroit trailed by 17 points in the third quarter before rallying to win its third straight game.

Indiana led 64-52 at the half, and threatened to blow the game open after moving out to a 77-60 lead early in the third.

But Grant Hill scored 13 points in the third period and the Pistons were within 89-79 with 12 minutes to go.

The lead was just six when Terry Mills scored the first four points of the fourth quarter.

Mark West's three-point play gave the Pistons a 98-97 lead with 5:32, and the lead was still one point when the game saw its most controversial play.

Dale Davis grabbed an offensive rebound, but was called for a foul. He protested and was ejected by referee Scott Foster. Dumars hit the two technical free throws, and Johnny Dawkins hit the two for the foul, giving Detroit a 104-99 lead with 3:28 left.

Indiana tied it with 1:34 to play, led by Mark Jackson's three-point play, before Dumars settled the issue.

He hit the first of two free throws with 58 seconds to go, but missed the second. Rookie Bill Curley tipped the rebound to Dumars, who dribbled the clock down to 38 seconds, then made a 3-pointer to give Detroit a 112-108 lead.

Cavaliers 108, Bucks 88

CLEVELAND – Mark Price's 3-pointer started a decisive 27-9 run in the third quarter Thursday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers overcame a four-point halftime deficit and beat the Milwaukee Bucks 108-88.

Bucks rookie Glenn Robinson, the top pick in this year's draft, scored nine points on 3-of-13 shooting in his second appearance since signing a 10-year, $68 million contract. He missed all seven of his floor shots in the second half and finished with four rebounds, two turnovers and one block. He was 0-for-3 on 3-point tries.

Baseball talks strike out again

Knight-Ridder News Service

RYE BROOK, N.Y. – When all-powerful acting commissioner Bud Selig jets in from Milwaukee, stays 2½ hours and leaves, you get the impression that they won't be settling the baseball strike this weekend.

When union head Donald Fehr announces that he won't be available to negotiate for part of Saturday because he'll be at David Cone's wedding, you get the impression that they won't be settling the baseball strike this weekend.

When the first order of business at the first negotiating session in 62 days consists of lunch, you get the impression that they won't be settling the baseball strike this weekend.

So if what happened Thursday at the glitzy Doral-Arrowwood resort was the first step toward settling the great baseball strike of 1994, it appeared to be an Eddie Gaedel kind of step, as opposed to a Frank Thomas kind of step.

But the good news was that at least the two sides did bargain — for, incredibly, just the fourth time in a strike that will be three months old Saturday.

They even met until well after Happy Hour — in a six-hour session that lasted until 7:30 p.m., to be precise.

And afterward, there was a slight air of actual hopefulness, if only because the new mediator in town, the renowned William J. Usery, has them approaching this very old mess in a whole new fashion.

ISDB girls defeat Christian Academy

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – The Idaho School for the Deaf had five of six girls score in double figures Thursday night and rolled past the Twin Falls Christian Academy 57-18.

Sore shoulder knocks Capriati from event

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA – Jennifer Capriati withdrew from the doubles in the Virginia Slims of Philadelphia Thursday because of a sore right shoulder.

Capriati was scheduled to play with Mercedes Paz against third-seeded Pam Shriver and Elizabeth Smylie in a first-round match. On Wednesday, Capriati played her first tournament match in more than a year, losing 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 to Anke Huber.

Tournament officials were not sure of the severity of the injury and did not know when Capriati would begin playing competitively again. Capriati previously was plagued by injuries and personal problems since leaving the women's tour after the 1993 U.S. Open.

The 18-year-old was given a citation by police last December after walking away from a store with a $15 ring. In May, she was charged with carrying a small amount of marijuana.

In singles play, Brenda Schultz used serves of more than 103 mph to defeat Lindsay Davenport 2-6, 6-2, 6-4 Thursday in the second round.

Schultz powered her way past the third seed, among the hardest baseline hitters on the women's tour.

"I knew the only way to beat Lindsay was to hit harder than she does," Schultz said. "If she starts hitting hard and cranking it up, she'll hit winners all over the place."

No. 2 seed Mary Pierce struggled early before winning 10 of the last 11 games en route to a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Patty Fendick.

Pierce will next play 16-year-old newcomer Meilen Tu, who defeated Katerina Maleeva 6-4, 6-3. Tu, a wild-card entry from Northridge, Calif., won for the second time on the tour to advance to the quarterfinals.

No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini got off to a slow start before beating Joanette Kruger, 6-4, 6-0.

Nathalie Tuziat, who beat Martinez in her first match, was eliminated by Kimberly Po 6-3, 2-6, 7-5 less than 18 hours after her upset victory. Po won the final two games and beat Tauziat with a backhand lob at match point.

Sampras avoids upset bug at championship

ANTWERP, Belgium – Pete Sampras beat Richey Reneberg 6-3, 6-3 Thursday to reach the quarterfinals of the European Community Championship and remain the only star player in the $1.1 million event.

The world's No. 1 player showed no ill effects from a throat infection that almost forced him out of the tournament early in the week. His easy win left him as the only top five seed in the tournament.

"I feel a lot better now," Sampras said. "I gave the virus to Stefan."

Stefan Edberg, the No. 3 seed, withdrew from the tournament because of tonsilitis, giving American Jared Palmer a free ride into the quarterfinals.

Martina draws Sabatini for final career match

PHILADELPHIA – Martina Navratilova will open the last tournament of her career against Gabriela Sabatini in the $3.5 million Virginia Slims Championship in New York.

Navratilova, the most successful tennis player in history, is retiring after the tournament, which marks the final stop on the 1994 women's tour. The 38-year-old has won 167 singles titles and earned more than $20.5 million since turning pro in 1973.

Sabatini, who reached the quarterfinals of the Virginia Slims of Philadelphia on Thursday, said she is looking forward to playing against Navratilova in the round-robin tournament.

"I'm excited," Sabatini said. "I love to play against Martina, and it's going to be very special because it's her last tournament. I want to win, too. I hope we can play our best and make it a good match."

Navratilova won 18 grand slam titles, including nine Wimbledons, in singles, 31 in doubles and six in mixed doubles. Navratilova decided earlier this season that this would be her last on tour.

didn't feel good physically.

"I couldn't make the contribution I needed to or wanted to. I definitely think it's the right time for me. I'll always remember today as my last day as a Laker."

Worthy said the death of his mother wasn't a factor.

"I know she would want me to go on and play," he said.

Worthy, a seven-time All-Star and MVP of the 1988 finals, when the Lakers beat Detroit to win their most recent championship, joined the team in 1982 as the No. 1 pick in the NBA draft.

The 6-foot-9 forward from North Carolina helped the Lakers win three NBA championships.

"I'd just like to be remembered as a team player," he said. "There are so many fond memories I'll have to carry on with. To be a Laker was everything to me. We took it to another level, we were just a step ahead. We couldn't do what we did without that chemistry, that unity."

Former teammates Abdul-Jabbar, Johnson and Michael Cooper, now an assistant with the Lakers, sat at the table with Worthy during the news conference.

Among others who played key roles in the 1980s were Kurt Rambis, who has also retired; Byron Scott, who plays for the Indiana Pacers; A.C. Green, a member of the Phoenix Suns, and coach Pat Riley, now with the New York Knicks.

Big Sky leaders hope to avoid upsets to also-rans

The Associated Press

This is the weekend football teams in the lower half of the Big Sky Conference standings have a chance to catch the front-runners looking ahead a week.

No. 4 ranked Idaho, No. 5 Montana and Boise State are tied on top of the standings with 4-1 Big Sky marks, 8-1 overall, and all play teams in the lower half of the standings on Saturday.

Boise State is at Eastern Washington, Montana is at Idaho State and Idaho hosts Weber State. In a nonleague game, Northern Arizona is at Cal State-Northridge and Montana State has the weekend off.

But the big games come the following Saturday, and coaches of the three front-runners will have to guard against a letdown.

It could be particularly hard for Boise State, ranked No. 10 in the latest Division I-AA Sports Network poll. The Broncos are coming off an emotional high, thrashing previously undefeated Montana 38-14 last weekend, and will play Idaho the next weekend.

But in between, the Broncos travel to Cheney, and Boise State hasn't won there since Eastern joined the Big Sky in 1987. Eastern is 4-5 overall, 2-4 in league.

Boise State can capture the Big Sky title by defeating Idaho Nov. 19 — but must beat Eastern Washington first.

Montana has the same problem, meeting traditional rival Montana State the weekend after traveling to Pocatello to play ISU (4-3, 3-3). Star quarterback Dave Dickinson, the Big Sky's most valuable offensive player last season, also is hobbled with an ankle injury suffered in the Boise State game.

Montana said senior backup Bert Wilberger would start but there was a chance that Dickinson would get in the Idaho State game.

Boise quarterback Tony Hilde sustained a slightly separated shoulder against Montana but is expected to start Saturday. Meanwhile, running back K.C. Adams, who leads Idaho's Sherriden May by exactly one yard in rushing, is nursing a groin pull and a bad ankle.

But Adams, who leads the Big Sky in all purpose rushing and scoring, is expected to start against Eastern.

May has 60 touchdowns for his career and will set a Division I-AA record if he scores against Weber State.

Idaho also has had injury problems, but freshman quarterback Brian Brennan has received the starting job against Weber State. Craig Hisaw, who was the starter earlier, has recovered enough to play against Weber if necessary.

Weber State coach Dave Arslanian said Idaho is a dangerous team, in the middle of the battle for the league championship. "We are their last home game of the season, so I am sure their seniors will be fired up. Sherriden May may be the best running back in Division I-AA.

"It doesn't look as though they have lost anything at the quarterback position. Brennan has come in and picked up right up," Arslanian said.

Coaches predict Montana, BSU will battle for women's hoop title

The Lady Griz under 12th-year head coach Robin Selvig received 48 points, while Boise State and mentor June Daugherty were picked second with 41. Last spring, the two shared the regular-season championship.

Montana went on to capture the 1993-94 tournament title and owns the league's longest streak of championships. Montana has topped the conference nine of the last 12 years.

Montana State filled the third slot with 39 points.

Northern Arizona was fourth with 28 points and Weber State in fifth with 21. Idaho State came next with 19 points, Eastern Washington had 18 and Idaho 10.

Montana must replace three starters from last year's 25-5 team. Its leading returnee is forward Kristy Langton-Schlimgen, who averaged 11.4 points and 6 rebounds as a junior last season.

Montana defeated Nevada-Las Vegas in Missoula, 77-67, and moved on to Stanford to take on the Cardinals in second-round action.

Stanford handed the Lady Griz only their fifth loss of the season. Boise State made its first NCAA post-season appearance in the school's history, but fell to Washington.

Big Sky fans will have the opportunity to watch three league encounters on Prime Sports Northwest. On Jan. 13, Northern Arizona and Montana State will kick off the schedule in Bozeman, Mont., followed by Montana and Boise State on Jan. 27 in Boise. The season finale features live coverage of the Big Sky championship game on March 11 at a site to be determined.

Stark, a 6-foot-2-inch post who averaged eight points, six rebounds and three blocks a game, and Richelle Anderson, a 5-8 guard, who averaged five points and three assists per game in 1993-94.

"The place we needed help was inside," said Miller.

Miller got it.

Using Jessica McEwen, a 6-foot-3-inch sophomore, in the post allows Miller to move Arrossa to the perimeter, where her size will create a mismatch with most other teams.

Rounding out the lineup are Paula Morgan, a 5-foot-10-inch junior forward and Jamie Anderson, a 5-foot-8-inch junior guard who averaged four points a game last year.

Filer Wildcats

"Offensively, this is as good as a team I've ever had," Lenington said. "These kids can really shoot the basketball and run the floor. They have the ability to put up good numbers."

Chandler holds the 3-point record at Filer with 37 long-range bombs in a season and five in one game. She was selected all-conference last year as a junior.

But scoring isn't all she does. Chandler will be Filer's leader on the court. "Chandler is the smartest player we have with the basketball," Lenington said. "The trio of Chandler, Lutz and Cowger will be taking most of our shots."

Lenington has five players back from last year's team that took third in the Canyon Conference District A-3 tournament – one place away from a chance at state. The Wildcats finished the season 16-8.

Chandler averaged 10 points a game last year and Christie Hall, a 5-8 forward with three years of varsity experience, added eight rebounds per game.

The question mark for Filer is defense.

"Last year we had the ace in the hole that we felt we could step up and stop you," Lenington said. "We don't have that mentality yet. But in the past week we've really improved."

"I don't want to go out on a limb and say come see us play," Lenington said. "I would be very disappointed if at the very least we didn't get a shot at a playoff spot to go to state."

Valley Vikings

"This is a rebuilding year," Malone said. "I think the main thing will be the transition from junior varsity to varsity. If they can make that adjustment, then we'll be OK."

The Vikings' only returning starter is 5-foot-10-inch Lindi Schwarz, who averaged six points and three rebounds a game. Sarah Huettig and Katie Brune also saw a lot of floor time last year.

"Those three have the burden on their shoulders as far as being team leaders and players we look to," Malone said.

Declo Hornets

The Hornets finished last year 14-8, and tied with Kimberly and Filer for second place entering the district tournament. They return four starters from the 1993-94 team.

The last time the Hornets went to state was 1991 where they took second. They will be looking for a spot again this year.

To do that, coach Lynn Payne looks to 5-foot-11-inch Angela Silcock, who averaged 10.3 points and 8.5 rebounds a game last year.

Payne also will draw from 5-11 Molly Jorgensen, guard Kara Heward and 5-7 Janil Stimpson.

"We're not really deep. We're about seven or eight deep with regular players," Payne said. "We have to be careful with fouls.

Glenns Ferry Pilots

Last year's 4-17 team started two freshman and one sophomore. The first player off the bench also was a freshman.

Whether one year of varsity experience for those four will be enough remains to be seen.

"Last year they were just learning the ropes," Brock said. "This year we're getting through things in practice so much quicker than I dreamed we would last year."

In addition to a lack of experience, Glenns Ferry enters the season with a short bench.

"My bench will be very inexperienced," Brock said. She also doesn't have a go-to player.

Her returning starters are sophomores Annie Farris and Darcy Gennette, junior Jennifer Solosabal and senior Cindy Labrum.

"The scoring will be pretty balanced. There isn't any one person that will stand out over others," Brock said.

Wendell Trojans

New coach Brett Wright takes over a Trojan team that went 1-17 last year and did not have a summer program.

He's teaching his team the basics like learning how to win.

"Learning how to win is the biggest obstacle," Wright said. "We're just doing the basics. We're taking good athletes and making them basketball players. I think we can surprise some people this year."

Wright is working with three seniors for experience and three returning starters.

Kelby Bennett, a 5-foot-8-inch senior, led the Trojans last year. The other two starters were senior forward Kellie Mattix and 5-6 junior Kylee Scott.

Wendell will have the addition of Lachelle Newton who quit in midseason last year.

Wright said Newton will be the "go-to person" and is capable of scoring 15-20 points a game.

Gooding Senators

He hopes the experience will come quickly, as last year's team finished 4-18 and placed fifth in the district.

Durfee does have the luxury of his leading scorer returning in Connie Strickland. Jessica Adamson is the other returning starter. Adamson can score, but at 5-feet, 6-inches, her height is a disadvantage in her post position.

"We had better hope for quickness because we're not big enough to power anybody," Durfee said. "We're definitely young. It's a matter of trying to gain experience off the junior varsity.

With only four players returning from last year's team, Durfee will look to 5-foot-7-inch junior Raleigh Thompson, 5-foot-8-inch junior Lisa Ogden and 6-footer Bobbie Jo Miller, a sophomore, for additional help and height.

With Burley gone, Buhl looks for return trip to A-2 state

By Chelsey Erbaugh
Times-News writer

A-2 preview

Burley's move up to Class A-1 may pave the way for Buhl to repeat as the District 4's A-2 champion and a return trip to the state tournament.

Returning seniors Jeny Black, at 5-foot-10 and 5-foot-7-inch Amber Satterwhite hope to lead the way past Wood River and Jerome. "Jeny and Amber both have lots of experience and are excellent players. I expect a lot from them this year," Buhl coach Joe Shepard said.

Black, a three-year starter who averaged 12 points and seven rebounds, played her second Basketball Congress International summer and found herself in Arizona on the Idaho National team.

Satterwhite, who also played a year of BCI, poured in eight points and added six assists per game last season.

Joining Black and Satterwhite in the starting lineup will be senior Melissa Bartosovsky and sophomores Angie Schroeder and Jana Watson.

Shepard's main concern is the lack of outside firepower due to the graduation of guards Patricia Chivers and Leesa Cooper.

"We have a solid starting five and are fine depth wise, but we have three or four girls who need to step up and do the job from the outside. If they do, we'll be all right," said Shepard.

Shepard looks for another tight race with Jerome. Last season there was a three-way tie between Buhl, Burley and Jerome heading into district playoffs. Each team carried a 4-2 conference record, with each team splitting the season series with their opponents.

Even though Burley is out of the district this year, last year's Bobcat coach is not. Michelle Skyles moved to Jerome, where she will again match up against Buhl and Wood River.

Jerome Tigers

The Tigers have been a half-court team in recent years, due to the strong post play of Julee James and Landis Barnes. But with those players gone, Skyles said Jerome must change its look.

"In the past, Jerome has had Division 1 scholarship players inside so they played a slow-down game and pounded it in. This year, we don't have the height and strength to do that," Skyles said.

The loss of Katie and Alice Bailey hurt Jerome in the height category. The 6-foot-plus sisters moved to Texas, leaving the Tigers with sophomore Lanie Barnes as the lone 6-footer.

Skyles hopes to make the move to a more fast-paced style of play.

"It's been slow trying to change the team's style of play from a slow-down team to an up-tempo team. It may take a while to reach the level of play we are hoping for," she said.

The floor general for the running offense should be 5-foot-7 returning starter Tonia Burk. In addition, Skyles said she is impressed with senior Gwen Roberts and says a summer of BCI improved Barnes' play.

"No one will be a star for us. We will be well balanced, and everybody will be in on our offense," Skyles said.

Despite the difficulty in changing a team's total look, Skyles remains optimistic. "We are a young team with a lot of heart. Hopefully we will improve as the year progresses and be at the top of our game by district time," Skyles said. "Who knows what will happen if we can do that."

Wood River Wolverines

"We do have younger kids, but they have a great attitude and the older kids are willing to help them along. I think both groups will benefit," said Wolverine coach J.C. Nemecek.

"We're not near as tall, but we'll make up for it in speed," he said.

That lack of size means 5-foot-9-inch senior Tara Pyle will move to forward or post. Pyle averaged 12.3 points and 5.3 rebounds as a guard last season.

"I know we are young and small, but I hope we can surprise some people this year," Nemecek said.

Buhl's Watson eyes big year

By Chelsey Erbaugh
Times-News writer

BUHL – In district championship games, coaches look for experience. They look for veteran players to take the shots when the game is on the line. They put the ball in the hands of their confident juniors and seniors.

Or they pull a Joe Shepard and put the ball in the hands of a freshman – then sit back and watch it pay off in a big way.

When 6-foot Jana Watson moved up to varsity in the middle of her freshman year of Buhl High School basketball last year, she was nervous.

"All the other players were older, and I wanted to do good around them and impress them," Watson said.

Burley coach Michelle Skyles was impressed.

"Freshmen don't understand pressure, they just perform. Jana did a great job," said Skyles, who now coaches at Jerome.

Despite her success, Watson admits feeling uncomfortable after being brought up. "I didn't know the plays, and it was hard getting used to the players and their expectations," she said.

The older players were supportive, and Watson said she began to feel like part of the team right away.

"They got used to me, and I got used to them and that loosened me up a lot on the court," Watson said.

This season, Watson will step into the starting role vacated by Ramie Owen, who graduated.

"As players get older, they either answer the pressure and keep fighting, or they struggle. I expect Jana to be an impact player this year," Skyles said.

As a sophomore, Buhl's starting center feels confident.

"I'm a lot more comfortable on the floor," she said.

Indian fans hope that confidence, along with Shepard's coaching tactics, will earn Buhl another district championship.

Minnesota standout signs with MSU

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Nathan Holmstadt, a forward-center from Monticello, Minn., has signed a national letter of intent to play basketball at Montana State, coach Mick Durham announced. "Nathan was our number-one inside recruit from the time we saw him play this summer," Durham said Thursday. "He will be able to play both center and power forward in the Big Sky Conference. Holmstadt is a 6-foot-8, 225-pound senior. He averaged 24 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots as a junior last year.

"In a way I want to intimidate and in way I'm intimidated myself," McEwen said.

Stark quickly countered her understudy's concern. "She will help us a lot. She has lots of potential."

Miller sees likenesses in the two towers.

"Chaunda and Jessica are a lot alike," he said. "When Chaunda was younger, she had the same type of talents in a lot of the same ways that Jessica does."

Both move well and shoot with a soft touch, Miller said.

"A lot of times kids smaller and quicker will get down the floor better. Chaunda has overcome that. She moves about as well as any of the big girls around here," he said. "Jessica is improving by leaps and bounds."

Stark averaged eight points, six rebounds and three blocks a game last year for the Bulldogs. She also was selected to represent the South Idaho Basketball Congress International team.

"Chaunda has without a doubt been the most pleasant surprise. She has turned into a complete ballplayer," Miller said. "There isn't a weak side to her game right now."

Cowboys-49ers matchup headlines NFL weekend

The Associated Press

A look at Sunday's matchups for Week 11 in the National Football League (all times MDT; last season's records and rankings in parentheses):

DALLAS (8-1)
AT SAN FRANCISCO (7-2) 2 p.m.

LINE — San Francisco by 3½.

RECORD VS. SPREAD — Cowboys 5-4; 49ers 5-3-1.

SERIES RECORD — 49ers lead 9-6-1.

LAST TIME MET — Rematch of last two NFC Championship games. Cowboys won last year's contest in Dallas 38-21.

LAST GAME — 49ers tuned-up for big game by jumping out to 30-6 lead in Washington before beating Redskins 37-22. Cowboys warmed up by dominating Giants 38-10 on Monday night.

COWBOYS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 4), PASS (No. 10), OVERALL (No. 6)

Rolled up 450 total yards last week. RB Emmitt Smith ran for 163 yards on club-record 35 carries. He is second in NFL with 911 yards rushing and leads with 11 TDs. QB Troy Aikman is league's second-rated passer (97.8). WR Alvin Harper, having his best year averaging 23 yards per catch with six TDs, suffered knee injury last week and is expected to miss 2-4 four weeks.

49ERS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 10), PASS (No. 8), OVERALL (No. 7)

Lead NFL in points per game (30.4). QB Steve Young is league's leading passer with 101.8 rating. He leads in completion percentage (69.1) and average yards per pass (8.25). WR Jerry Rice has 52 catches (tied for fourth in NFC) for 771 yards (second in NFC) and seven TDs. TE Brent Jones has 31 catches, 420 yards and five TDs. RB Ricky Watters leads team with 467 yards rushing.

COWBOYS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 7), PASS (No. 1), OVERALL (No. 1)

Allowing 254.1 yards per game after holding Giants to just 183 yards and 11 first downs. S James Washington had his fourth INT last week to tie him for team lead with S Darren Woodson. Team has 13 INTs.

49ERS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 6), PASS (No. 7), OVERALL (No. 7)

Have held last three opponents under 300 total yards. S Tim McDonald scored his second TD of season with 73-yard INT return. DE Charles Mann had his first sack as Niner. DT Dana Stubblefield leads team with six sacks. One of main reasons CB Deion Sanders was signed was his ability to cover WR Michael Irvin. Last year, while with Falcons, Sanders held Irvin to one catch for 5 yards.

SPECIAL TEAMS — Cowboys K Chris Boniol leads NFC with 74 points. KR Kevin Williams is second in NFC in kickoff returns (29.4). ... 49ers KR Dexter Carter had 96-yard kickoff return for TD vs. Redskins.

STREAKS, STATS AND NOTES — Sanders scored TD on 70-yard pass against Dallas last year in Atlanta's 27-14 victory.

SERIES RECORD — Chiefs lead 35-32-1.

LAST TIME MET — Chargers held Chiefs without TD in their 20-6 victory in Week 6.

LAST GAME — Chargers lost to Falcons 10-9 in Georgia Dome. Kansas City moved to one game behind Chargers in AFC West with 13-3 win over Raiders.

CHARGERS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 1), PASS (No. 15), OVERALL (No. 9)

QB Stan Humphries (elbow) missed last week's games. QB Gale Gilbert threw for 208 yards, but could not get team into end zone. For second time in three games offense failed to score TD. Humphries will be back this week. RB Natrone Means had his club-record fifth straight 100-yard game vs. Falcons. Means leads AFC in rushing (892-yards) and rushing TDs (nine).

CHIEFS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 13t), PASS (No. 4), OVERALL (No. 3)

CHARGERS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 4t), PASS (No. 13), OVERALL (No. 8t)

Held Falcons to 219 total yards. CB Dwayne Harper had two INTs last week. MLB Junior Seau had season-low four tackles vs. Falcons. Rank second in AFC with 27 sacks. Defensive ends Leslie O'Neal and Chris Mims have combined for 14.5. Allowing just 16.8 points per game (third in AFC). S Stanley Richard has scored two TDs on his two INTs.

CHIEFS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 21), PASS (No. 11), OVERALL (No. 19)

Had best game in weeks, allowing 248 total yards with five sacks, two INTs and season-low three points vs. Raiders. Unit is tied for third in AFC with 24 sacks. DE Neil Smith had two sacks last week and is tied for second in AFC with 7.5. They have 22 sacks in their six wins. OLB Derrick Thomas has seven sacks.

SPECIAL TEAMS — Chargers K John Carney leads NFL with 93 points and 25 FGs. Rookie Andre Coleman is third in AFC in kickoff returns (24.9).

STREAKS, STATS AND NOTES — Chiefs have beaten Chargers four straight in Kansas City.

Dallas Cowboys defenders Jim Jeffcoat (77) and Leon Lett (78) are hoping for repeat of last year's NFC Championship victory over Steve Young and the San Francisco 49ers; the 49ers aren't.

RECORD VS. SPREAD — Seahawks 3-5; Broncos 4-4-1.

SERIES RECORD — Broncos lead 21-13.

LAST TIME MET — Broncos won their first game of year with Week 6 win over Seahawks 16-9.

LAST GAME — Seahawks lost their fifth straight 20-17 in overtime to Bengals. Broncos lost to Rams 27-21 in Anaheim.

SEAHAWKS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 8), PASS (No. 26), OVERALL (No. 20)

QB Rick Mirer's rating has fallen to 73.5 after 13-for-32 preformance vs. Bengals. Have scored just 79 points during five-game losing streak. RB Chris Warren has seven TDs, is third in AFC in rushing yards (805) and yards from scrimmage (1,003). WR Brian Blades is second in AFC with 51 catches for 647 yards and four TDs.

BRONCOS OFFENSE — RUSH (No. 22), PASS (No. 5), OVERALL (No. 8)

QB John Elway is third-rated passer in AFC (87.4). He's third in conference in yards (2,361) and TDs (12). Glyn Milburn has 47 catches to lead all running backs. TE Shannon Sharpe has 46 receptions for 599 yards. RB Leonard Russell ran for 103 yards in first meeting and leads team with eight TDs. Line has allowed 26 sacks. Lead NFL in first downs with 203.

SEAHAWKS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 20), PASS (No. 27), OVERALL (No. 27)

Have 12 INTs on season (fourth in conference), but just one in last five games. Allowed 496 total yards to Bengals. First-round pick DT Sam Adams had his second sack of season last week. OLB Terry Wooden leads team with 86 tackles, including 12 or more in five of past six games, and is tied for team lead with two INTs.

BRONCOS DEFENSE — RUSH (No. 15), PASS (No. 28), OVERALL (No. 28)

Permitted 385 total yards, 244 through air, to Rams. Rank last in NFL in sacks (seven) and last in AFC in points allowed per game (25.9). Pass defense yields 257.7 yards per game. S Rondell Jones and CB Randy Hilliard are tied for team lead with two INTs. Forced five turnovers in last meeting with Seahawks.

Good news can't keep market from falling

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 3,821.99, down 9.76, after shooting up 27 points and then hovering with modest gains for most of the day.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 280.90 million shares, down from 337.78 million Wednesday.

A weakening of computer stocks depressed broad-market indexes, which are heavily weighted toward technology issues. The NYSE's composite index fell 0.66 to 254.35. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index declined 1.03 to 464.37.

The Nasdaq composite index slid 2.87 to 764.38. The American Stock Exchange's market value index lost 1.66 to 449.59.

Stocks rose early in the day with bond prices, after the Labor Department said its producer price index, a measure of inflation at the wholesale level, plunged 0.5 percent in October. Analysts had expected a modest increase of around 0.2 percent.

AT&T, Mexican firm join in $1 billion phone deal

MEXICO CITY — AT&T Corp., seeking to cash in on Mexico's appetite for better communications, announced Wednesday a $1 billion venture with Mexican conglomerate Alfa to provide business and residential phone service.

AT&T, the leading U.S. long-distance company, said the investment would be spread out over a period of four to six years.

"We expect the market in Mexico to grow dramatically over the next decade, and this is going to require an enormous amount of capital," AT&T Executive Vice President Victor Pelson said at a news conference with Alfa executives.

Mexico has only eight phones lines for every 100 inhabitants despite a rapid and ongoing overhaul.

Analysts expect freer business climate

New York Daily News

NEW YORK — Few constituencies despise Washington as much as Wall Street. To most financiers, the federal government is unresponsive and anti-business.

Yet, the small band of experts Wall Street firms employ to keep an eye on political developments were guarded in their assessments with Republicans ready to take control of both houses of Congress for the first time in 40 years.

"The Republicans think they got a mandate, just like (President) Clinton thought he had a mandate in 1992," said Leslie Alperstein, managing director of NatWest Washington Analysis. "But I don't think that's the case. For the markets, that will mean a lot of chaos and uncertainty."

The most important thing to remember about the new Congress is that all committee chairmanships will change, removing some powerful opponents of legislation that has become stalled — such as telecommunications and banking deregulation.

Here's the outlook:

• Taxes: Analysts were split on the prospects for a capital gains tax cut. A longtime favorite of the GOP to spur investment, the GOP's "Contract for America" calls for a 50% exclusion on any capital gains.

If passed, a capital gains cut would likely boost profits at Wall Street brokerages as investors look to cash in winning investments.

• Health Care: Comprehensive health care reform is dead forever. But incremental change is likely. "One area being discussed is insurance reforms, such as portability and the elimination of the restrictions on pre-existing conditions," said Mary Aronson, of Aronson Washington Research.

Also, look for increased attention to devices such as tax-free medical savings accounts, which enable consumers to shelter money to pay for medical expenses.

Congress also is expected to ride herd on the Food and Drug Administration for faster approval of new drugs. Pharmaceutical stocks could rise.

• Banking: This is an area where the change in committee chairmanships means a world of difference. Efforts to change the Glass-Steagall Act — which was passed in 1933 and barred banks from getting into the securities business and securities firms from entering banking — were stymied in large part by John Dingell, D-Mich., the iron-willed chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. Dingell's father was one of the act's architects.

But with Dingell now in the minority, and a new House banking committee chairman in Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, the prospects for a Glass-Steagall overhaul are much brighter.

Moreover, New York's GOP Sen. Alfonse D'Amato will chair the Senate Banking Committee. He also is a proponent of banking reform, although he has to tread a thin line between two powerful New York-based interest groups, banks and securities firms.

• Telecommunications: Legislation that would have allowed the Baby Bells to compete in the long distance market was derailed this session. All the major players in telecommunications, most notably Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., and Sen. Fritz Hollings, D-S.C., will lose their clout in the next Congress.

"This legislation probably will return to square one for a completely new look next year," said Charles Gabriel Jr., head of the Washington Research Group for Mabon Securities.

Cable companies will not be left out, either. Stung by a flood of new Federal Communications Commission rules, the cable industry is likely to get some relief as a GOP-controlled Congress puts pressure on regulators to ease up.

• Tobacco: The two biggest threats to the industry from Washington are steep increases in cigarette taxes and a declaration that

Economists see rate hike

The Associated Press

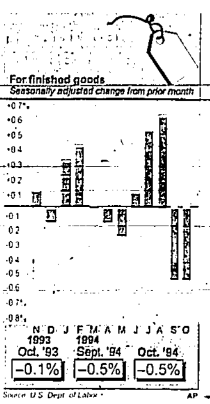
WASHINGTON — Falling prices for autos, energy and food produced a second huge monthly decline in inflation at the wholesale level in October.

But economists said the good news won't prevent another interest rate increase by the Federal Reserve next week.

The big decline in the Labor Department's Produce Price Index was identical to the 0.5 percent decrease reported in September, marking the first time the index has posted back-to-back declines in three years.

Both the Clinton administration and Wall Street welcomed the price report, which was unexpected.

However, private analysts said they still expected the Federal Reserve to boost interest rates for a sixth time when it meets next Tuesday.



GOP-led Congress throws scare into consumer groups

Newsday

Consumer groups said they will have to be more selective and more defensive now that the Republicans have swept into power on Capitol Hill.

Republican control of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives in January is expected to bring new attempts to scale back government, said Pamela Gilbert, director of Public Citizen's Congress Watch, founded by Ralph Nader. In turn, she argued, this could result in less consumer protection.

"It falls into the category of their anti-government agenda," she said, referring to the many Republicans and business representatives who target what they call burdensome regulation.

One item that consumer advocates will continue to press next year is federal legislation to increase consumer safeguards in credit reporting.

The credit reporting legislation would expand safeguards in correcting credit reports faster and with less expense. The legislation died in Congress this year when a lone Republican, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, blocked its passage.

Gramm's opposition as an influential Republican on the ascendancy is "cause for concern," said Karen Kirchgasser, spokeswoman for Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., the bill's Senate sponsor, who won re-election.

Still, Kirchgasser said many Republicans had supported the bill. Edmund Mierzwinski, a program director for U.S. Public Interest Research Group, a Washington, D.C., consumer group, said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., has supported the credit reporting bill, "and the odds are very high that he will be chairman of the Senate Banking Committee," which would handle the bill in the next session of Congress.

nicotine should be regulated as a drug.

Now, neither appear to be likely prospects as tobacco-friendly Rep. Tom Bliley, R-Va., could become chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

• Federal Reserve: Like the Supreme Court, the Federal Reserve is supposed to be disinterested in politics. And just like the Supreme Court, the Fed knows how to read election returns.

For Alan Greenspan, the results mean he will no longer be hectored by House Banking Committee Chair Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, about spiraling interest rates. He also may have gained a measure of job security.

"Yesterday's (Tuesday's) results reinforce my conclusion that Greenspan will still be acting as Fed chairman through the '96 election," said David Resler, chief economist at Nomura Securities.

PUBLISH: November 10 and 11, 1994.

PUBLIC NOTICE
Recent water samples taken on October 24, 1994 from North Rim Fairways Subdivision public drinking water system showed the presence of Total Coliform bacteria. This indicates that the drinking water system may have been contaminated, and as such, may pose a threat to public health.
Efforts are currently underway by this operator of the water system to determine the cause of the bacteriological contamination. This involves resampling the system, inspecting the components of the water system for problems, and taking appropriate corrective actions.
Meanwhile, users can do one of three things: They can boil water, used for consumption for five (5) minutes, secure drinking water from another approved source, or add 2 drops of bleach per quart and let the water sit for 30 minutes before drinking. Chlorine is currently being added and lines are being flushed in an attempt to clean out the system.
When two consecutive tests completing indicate that no problem remains, this notice will be cancelled. Five additional samples will be drawn next month to insure that the problem does not return.
For more information pertaining to this notice consumers can contact (1) the water system operator Dale Thompson, at 324-4560 or (2) The Division of Environmental Quality at 736-2190.
PUBLISH: Friday, November 11, 1994.

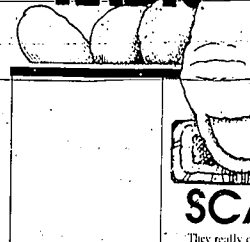
MUSIC LOVERS TEND TO BE RADIO ACTIVE



SCAN

They really can't help it. It's instinctive. The song fades away, the first few words of your commercial come on and PUSH—your message is history.

Unfortunately for advertisers, radio listeners are a push-button, station-hopping bunch. Because it's the music, not your message, that matters to them most.

And how could you be certain to reach them anyway? Although nearly every household in the Magic Valley has a radio, less than 16% of them are actually tuned-on during the average quarter hour, 6 a.m. to midnight. Your ad dollars can only fall into the cracks of this extremely fragmented audience.

Newspaper advertising, however, is different. Newspapers let you show your product. Offer a coupon. And tell your story with no time restraints.

If you're currently advertising on radio, we'd like to change your tune. Call us at (208)733-0931 and discover the power of the printed word.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Many eyes go through the meadow, but few see the flowers in it."
—Emerson.

Today, the reader is asked to defend from both the East and West sides of the table. Take the test to see if you can graduate with honors.

West leads the nine of your bid suit. Do you, East, take the first heart or do you encourage by playing the seven? The seven wins when West has two hearts and a quick entry. It loses when South can run a quick nine winners.

Did you take your heart king, believing that South has either the spade king or the diamond king to give him a quick nine tricks? Good, you've passed the first hurdle. The next one is easier; you shift to the diamond nine.

Now you've moved to the West seat. When South plays low to the diamond nine, do you allow it to ride to knock out dummy's ace? If you do, South makes the game. When South leads a heart to build his ninth winner, East wins and leads another diamond. Unfortunately, West can win his 10 and king, but South retains a stopper in the diamond queen, and he wins nine tricks.

To beat the game, West must play his 10 on East's diamond nine. When East wins his heart ace and leads the diamond eight, the defenders now have South's queen trapped. This nets the defense three diamonds and two hearts for one down and good marks for a fine defense.

ANSWER: Pass. At rubber bridge, the pass is usually best. At duplicate, where the trick-score is important, a false preference to two hearts is more attractive.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 12363, Dallas, Texas 75225, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

THE THEISEN MOTORS STORY BEGINS WITH SALES. WE SELL MORE BECAUSE WE SATISFY MORE!

Theisen Motors, the top Lincoln/Mercury dealer in the state of Idaho. No fleets or commercial vehicles, but family cars delivered one at a time to smart customers who demand quality & value. For over 40 years Idaho families have put their trust in Theisen Motors for automobile excellence.

Winners of the prestigious Chairman's Award, Ford Motor Co.'s highest award for sales & service satisfaction, judged by our customers. Unprecedented in the industry that one of the largest value dealers is also #1 in customer satisfaction 7 years in a row!

Theisen Motors believes that every customer deserves first class service. Top notch merchandise, genuine Lincoln/Mercury parts and convenient service hours. These are four good reasons for QUALITY, SERVICE, KNOWLEDGE, EXPERIENCE & PRIDE.

ACCORDING TO USA TODAY & J.D. POWERS SURVEY:

THE THEISEN MOTORS COMMITMENT:

The dictionary defines commitment: 1) A pledge to do something. 2) The state of being bound emotionally or intellectually to a course of action. Commit to place in trust or charge; to entrust. To pledge to a position, to bind or obligate by a pledge.

For over 40 years we at Theisen Motors have been committed to selling and servicing automobiles one way–to always strive for perfection.

OUR PLEDGE TO YOU:

1. To give the finest automobile service anywhere in the United States.
2. To always try to "Put ourselves in Your Shoes" in solving a service problem.
3. To be professional in sales, service and leasing.
4. To make our customers' ownership an enjoyable and rewarding experience.
5. To be "The Easiest Place In the World to Buy a Car!

POWER OF TRUST

You can't buy trust...you have to earn it. That's what Theisen Motors has been doing for 40 years: earning the trust & confidence of the people of Idaho with a total dedication to complete, long-term satisfaction.

It's paid off. People trust Theisen Motors for the right selection, the right price & service 6 days a week. That's how Theisen Motors remains #1 year after year. The Theisen Plan is one reason why over 80% of Theisen Motors customer are repeat customers...or referred by someone who has done business with Theisen Motors.

'NYPD Blue' gets new blood

By John Crook
TV Data

Detective Andy Sipowicz, (Dennis Franz) of "NYPD Blue" faces a life in flux.

As the second season progresses for the Tuesday ABC police drama, he continues his fight for sobriety. His romance with Assistant District Attorney Sylvia Costas (Sharon Lawrence) looks promising but tenuous.

And in the Nov. 15 episode, he reluctantly teams up with a new partner, Detective Bobby Simone (new series regular Jimmy Smits), to investigate the murder of a mobster's son.

In sum, front-burner story lines for actor Franz, just weeks after he won the Emmy for what he calls "without question" the role of his career.

"I have had a lot of roles that I've been fond of ... but nothing to the degree that I have been able to explore so many facets of this complex man's personality," he says. "To start off a series when a man is at such a low point, both personally and professionally, and then to have a year to rebuild his life, come to grips with his mistakes, and to hopefully get back on track again - to discover, along with him, things about his past that caused his downward spiral - has been a challenging, fulfilling year for any actor in any medium."

The actor is uncharacteristically coy about Sipowicz's relationship with the character played by Emmy winner Smits ("L.A. Law"), who, say both Franz and Lawrence, smoothly joined the ensemble.

"It's understandably going to take awhile for us to come to middle ground, and for Sipowicz to accept him as his partner," Franz says. "It's not initially an easy relationship."

His reluctance to divulge anything more is due to the fact that Simone is still a work-in-progress, he explains.

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — Roger Roberge's hairline has settled somewhere behind his ears, and what is left of his hair has turned gray and empties into a thick beard that dips below his collarbone. Moses comes to mind.

Roberge is 73, so it's not altogether surprising that he is involved in an ancient and dying enterprise. He collects and sells old 78-r.p.m. records and long-playing vinyl albums — 1940s Nat King Cole, 1920s Bing Crosby, Josef Marcus and his Bushveld Band doing South African folk songs from 1940.

The collection includes 60,000 LPs and 78s, and another 15,000 cuts on 45s. For do-it-yourselfers, there are reams of old sheet music.

In this age of compact discs, CD-ROMs and the all-powerful music video, to walk into Roberge's antiques and collectibles store is to fall into the embrace of a lost time; it is to understand that nostalgia is part history lesson, part fable and part love story.

"The thing is to be lucky enough to like all kinds of music," he says.

These are times when a nostalgic thread seems to string together much of the national discourse, from the baseball strike to fear of neighborhood crime to diversity. In this climate, Roberge and his little piece of the world stand as a monument to the way things used to be.

The ceiling inside the store, Mooncurser, on City Island in the Bronx, is done in old Broadway posters mostly from Broadway's long-gone Medford Theatre. There is a shower of old instruments hanging down — French horns, mandolins, violins, clarinets, trumpets, bamboo flutes. On one wall is a relatively recent Ebony magazine — 1971 — with baseball stars Willie Mays and Hank Aaron on the cover. Two decades later a Gentleman's Quarterly cover produced a delightful historical echo with Mays and Barry Bonds.

But as far as the music is concerned, Roberge believes the way it was is the way it should be, forever and ever, amen.

"The decade from 1925 to 1935 is the bestseller in sheet music," he says. "That music is still making a lot of people happy today. The doo-wop groups of the '50s and '60s will never die."

Celebrity gossip

Delany

Q: We were shocked when we saw actress Dana Delany playing the lead role in a really low-life movie. Isn't this a career breaker for her? — G.S.

A: Delany, 38, comes from a wealthy Connecticut family and is a graduate of Wesleyan University. That's why it surprises some when she gives interviews admitting to having sex on an airplane and in a public swimming pool. Let's just say that Dana, who isn't married, is outspoken. She's been dating Darius Anderson, a 31-year-old lobbyist for a supermarket chain. Yes, she shows a lot of her body in her latest flick, "Exit to Eden." It's billed as a comedy, and Delany portrays the head dominatrix at an S&M resort. The flick is rated R. Bad reviews, rather than her onscreen high jinks, may pose a setback to Dana's career.

Q: Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, the British actress who played the title role in "Scarlett" on TV, supposedly is forced to check into hotels under a phony name to duck photographers. Is it possible that she has become that famous that fast? — T.C.

A: Joanne, from Manchester, England, is not exactly a new face in movies. In 1988, she co-starred with then future husband Val Kilmer in "Willow." A year later, she played call girl Christine Keeler in "Scandal," about the infamous British Conservative government sex scandal of the '60s. She and Kilmer, who'll take over for Michael Keaton the title role in the upcoming "Batman" movie, are now recognizable Hollywood celebrities. Joanne confirms that they now have to check into hotels under a fake name.

Q: How on earth does Sylvester Stallone manage to stay so lean and muscular at his age? What is his secret? — M.T.

A: No question that Sly looks terrific at 48. Stallone is quite the exercise-er. He lifts, runs, pulls, pushes — the works. When my spy visited him recently on the London set of his latest flick, "Judge Dredd," another factor became clear: Sly sticks to a stringent diet — no more than 1,100 calories a day. A midnight "supper" consisted of nothing but a piece of cold chicken breast.

Stallone

Q: Can you tell us if Ralph Fiennes, the classy hunk who plays the Charles Van Doren character in the movie "Quiz Show," is linked romantically to Barbra Streisand? — A.R.

A: Barbra regards Fiennes, the 32-year-old British actor who made a splash as the concentration camp commander in "Schindler's List," as a remarkably talented new face. Her interest in him is strictly professional: She'd like to have him co-star as her love interest in a new movie titled, "A Mirror Has Two Faces." Good thing because Fiennes has been married to actress Alex Kingston for over a year now. Fiennes says his biggest headache at the moment is the issue made over the unusual pronunciation of his first and last names. They're pronounced "Rafe Fines."

Steisand

Q: Hasn't George Hamilton stopped speaking to his son since the breakup of the younger Hamilton's marriage to Shannen Doherty? — O.H.

A: The senior Hamilton is nothing if not worldly wise. Ashley, 19, got himself hitched to tabloid queen Doherty just two weeks after they met. George took it very much in stride, and remains the model of an understanding parent. After all, he impulsively married Ashley's mother — ex-model Alana Collins — in a quickie Las Vegas ceremony in 1972. George tells me he finds Shannen to be a spirited woman who was apparently right for his son "at that moment in his life."

Q: How does sexy singer Michael Bolton handle his women fan who come on to him backstage, even with their husbands present? — R.G.

A: That's a good question. When I put it to him, he nodded, then smiled and told me how he avoids hitting the jealousy button. Bolton's sensitive and romantic songs attract all sorts of women, who apparently regard their husbands as emotionally constipated dolts. When female fans speak to him backstage, "or look at me in a way that makes the men with them uncomfortable," he immediately "breaks off eye contact." Otherwise, Bolton says, "guys end up resenting you." Bolton clearly realizes how important it is not to offend jealous husbands.

Bolton

Q: Isn't it a fact that Jason Alexander is in real life exactly like the whiny, nebbishy George Costanza character he plays on TV's hit comedy "Seinfeld"? — V.W.

A: Just the opposite. Alexander advises anyone who will listen that if anyone resembling his character George should enter his life, he should walk the other way. Alexander recalls that early on his parents advised him against a showbiz career, urging him instead to pursue orthodontics. Perhaps because of such advice, Alexander says he has always been grounded about his aspirations. In real life, as opposed to reel life, the actor is neither a whiner nor a complainer and is definitely not a nebbish.

Dylan finds it difficult being apart from Jessica and decides to give Stephanie a piece of his mind. Ivana reminds Jessica about the court order forbidding her from seeing Dylan. Stephanie tells Brooke that Connor must truly despise the Forresters because he is Dylan Shaw's attorney. Taylor tells Yasemin that "Taylor" died in a plane crash and will now reside in Morocco as Lalla.

'Y&R' star stands up for her beliefs

Julianne Morris, who portrays Amy on "The Young and the Restless," recently found that her character would be placed in a most vulnerable situation. Amy decided to sleep with Nick in order to keep him interested in her despite the fact that Nick is in love with Sharon.

Now, in soaps this would be just another provocative incident. But the fact that Julianne Morris has been verbal in real life about being a virgin by choice adds a special element to the plot.

"I'm not a preacher and I respect other people's decisions," she told us, "but I have decided to wait (until marriage), and I have become open about my beliefs. There are many Christian organizations-who-have-contacted me and asked me to speak to young people on the subject of chastity. I recently spoke before a group of 1,700 young people in Omaha and it was a very enlightening experience. I never set out to be a role model, but that seems to be the role I've adopted. Kids came to me after my speech in Omaha and told me they were happy to see that they were not alone in their beliefs."

> 'I'm not a preacher ... but I have decided to wait ...'
> — Julianne Morris, on her virginity

The young actress said it was a very personal and private decision to wait until she is married before having sex. But once it was reported in an article she decided to go public. She admits that kids today have so much to deal with when considering becoming sexually active — with AIDS topping the list.

When asked about justifying Amy's decision to give in to Nick, Julianne said that "Y&R" never presents an action without showing the consequences down the line. She feels that Amy's current action may reap repercussions at a later date.

"I am also happy to report the show has been behind me 100 percent, and has never asked me to stop talking about chastity. Some of the young people I meet have called me naive for thinking most boys will accept a relationship without sex and I tell them my experiences. Taking sex out of it has resulted in building a deeper friendship with the guys I date."

Julianne is a brave young woman to stand by her beliefs in this day and age of teenage sexual permissiveness. Actually, she has the best of both worlds. In a way, she can play-out-fantasies when she portrays Amy and still go home a virgin when the director calls "Cut!"

Q: It sure seems like there's great chemistry between Annie Potts and Jay Thomas, co-stars of the "Love and War" TV series. Are these two an item? — M.R.

A: On "Love and War," Annie plays a gourmet chef with a low boiling point who continually locks horns with one of her customers, a character named Jack Stein (played by Thomas). He is a real TV sitcom veteran who began his career with "Mork & Mindy." Potts is best known for her co-starring role on "Designing Women." She says working with Thomas is a dreamboat assignment. "If there is someone better liked in show business than Jay I haven't met him," she says. Potts also adds in her characteristic squeaky-but-tough voice that she'd love to make a play for Jay but doesn't because she's married.

Q: Is it true that Michelle Pfeiffer is constantly seeking psychiatric help? If so, why? — A.R.

A: Michelle confesses to being a real worrier and pessimist. Her basic nature is dark, she concedes, and she always expects the worst. For personal reasons — especially after the breakup of her eight-year first marriage to former "thirtysomething" actor Peter Horton, whom Michelle wed at 22 — she's been a big fan of psychotherapy. She's been seeing shrinks for so long that she jocularly terms it her "part-time job." But Michelle says she also has a genuine, impersonal interest in the field: If she hadn't become a Hollywood star, she would have liked to become a psychiatrist.

Q: I am a big fan of Ted Wass, who stars as Nick Russo on "Blossom." I have followed him since he was Danny Dallas on "Soap," but I've yet to find any personal information about him. What's Ted's date of birth and family status? Where can I write to him to tell him what a terrific actor he is? — V.D.

A: Although acting is his bread and butter, Wass shares Nick Russo's love of music. In his younger days, Wass spent eight years as lead singer and guitarist in a rock band, and is a professionally trained opera singer. Born Oct. 27 in Lakewood, Ohio, he grew up in the Chicago suburb of Glen Ellyn. On the family end, Wass lives in Los Angeles with his children, Julian and Matilda. He lost his wife, actress Janet Margolin ("Take the Money" and "Run, Annie Hall"), last December to ovarian cancer. Write to him c/o Touchstone Television, 500 South Buena Vista St., Burbank, Calif. 91521.

Q: Would you please tell us what A Martinez is doing now? He starred in Santa Barbara and L.A. Law but we can't seem to find him any more. — V.L.B.,

A: Martinez's next role is opposite Connie Sellecca and Perry King in "She Led Two Lives" (Nov. 27 on NBC). He plays the wronged husband.

Q: I've seen Ellen DeGeneres in another sitcom or movie. Would you please tell me what show she's been in? I enjoy her very much; she is a great comedian. — Mrs. R.L.

A: The comic-turned-sitcom star made her TV series debut in 1989-90 playing office oddball Margo Van Meter in Fox's "Open House." Then she played Nurse Nancy MacIntrye in "Laurie Hill," a network series that died a quick death in the fall of 1992. DeGeneres' "These Friends of Mine," renamed "Ellen" this season, was an instant hit last spring.

Q: What has happened to Regina Taylor who starred in "I'll Fly Away?" I watched every episode and they were all great. — Y.A.B.

A: Although she doesn't have a regular series anymore, Taylor can next be seen guest starring in the Nov. 23 episode of "Law & Order" where she'll be reunited with her "I'll Fly Away" co-star Sam Waterston, a regular on the NBC series.

Q: Please give me some inside information on the co-host of the new show "Extra," Arthel Neville. How did she get the job, since I don't recognize her from any shows or movies? — F.S.

A: Neville brings a mix of broadcasting and acting to her job as co-anchor of the syndicated entertainment news show. She is the 20-something daughter of Neville Brothers keyboardist Art Neville and studied at Southern Methodist University and the University of Texas. She's acted in TV movies and daytime dramas and worked as an anchor/reporter at several TV stations, including ones in New Orleans, Houston and Austin. Neville is engaged to Dallas Cowboys running back Derrick Lassie.

Q: I am curious to know why Boyd Matson left "World News Now" several months ago. He is an excellent newsman. — D.A.

Q: Where have I seen Farrah Forke before? She recently guest-starred on "Lois & Clark" as Mayson Dmke. — B.C.

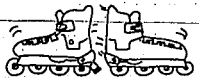
In-Line Skating



In-line skating is the fastest-growing sport in the country. Santa will probably be delivering many pairs of skates this Christmas.

As most of our readers know, in-line skates have wheels in a single line on a skating boot.

Skate with care

In-line skates are not toys. They are a type of transportation, just as bikes are. If you are not careful, the sport can be dangerous. Most of the skating injuries in 1993 were broken bones, especially wrists.

Gear up

It's important always to wear your protective gear:

- helmet
- elbow pads
- wrist guards
- knee pads

Look at this picture. Are the instructor and his student wearing all the right gear?

Take lessons

How to stop (this is most challenging)

- Bend knees.
- Scissor skates (move feet back and forth).
- Move left foot back.
- Move right foot forward (that's the one with the brake).

Stance and balance

- Bend knees.
- Feel some pressure on the balls of your feet.
- Put hands in front.
- Look straight ahead (avoid looking down at your skates).

How to fall

Go for the plastic (land on the protective pads you are wearing).

Skate alertly

- Control your speed.
- Watch for road hazards.
- Avoid water, oil and sand.
- Avoid heavy traffic.
- Never wear anything that limits hearing or vision.
- Don't skate at night.

Skate legally

- Obey all traffic regulations. When on skates, you have the same obligations as any wheeled vehicle.
- Yield the right of way to pedestrians.

Skate courteously

- Skate on the right, pass on the left.
- Let people know you are coming by saying in a loud tone:

Rookie Cookie's Recipe

Christmas Crunchies

You'll need:

- 2 cups semisweet chocolate chips
- 1/2 cup peanut butter
- 1 cup miniature marshmallows
- 1/2 cup pecan pieces
- 2 cups crisp rice cereal

What to do:

1. Place chocolate chips in a large, microwave-safe bowl. Microwave on HIGH 4 minutes or until melted.
2. Stir in peanut butter. Mix until smooth.
3. Stir in remaining ingredients. Mix well.
4. Place by teaspoonfuls on waxed paper.
5. Refrigerate until firm. Makes about 36.
